FIREMEN DO SPLENDID WORK AT TWO EARLY MORNING BLAZES.

Congratulations are being poured upon two firemen to-day for their conspicuous bravery and effective work at two different fires within twenty-four hours. They are Lieutenant Charles W. Conway and Ladderman John F. Lynch. At 4 rees on Shawmut avenue and at No. 15 Waltham street, these two men were instrumental in saving lives.

At the Waltham street fire the feature was the saving of the members of the Phipps family from the second floor. This family consists of husband and wife and four children. When the fire was discovered the house was full of smoke. The mother and father, grabbing their children, rushed to the front window. They called for help.

Grace Phipps, twelve years of age, and the oldest of the children was not satisfied to wait for the firemen but started down stairs. Through the blinding smoke she made her way to the street, not knowing what had happened to her parents and brothers and sisters.

Helped Family to Escape.

When District Chief Grady reached the scene he saw the Phipps family leaning from the window, and promptly responded to their cries for help. A ladder was raised and Lieutenant Conway and Laddermen Lynch, Feeley and Brattle helped the family to escape.

Mrs. Julia Casey, who with her husband, Michael, and her two sons occupy the third floor, was sitting in the kitchen, reading, when she noticed a strong odor of smoke. Hobbling to the hall door she opened it, only to be driven back by the clouds of smoke which poured into the room.

Returning to his parents, young Casey started to lead the way down the two flights of stairs which separated them from the open air, the father supporting the aged and invalid mother. When he reached the street, however, he was surprised to find

3 BURNED TO DEATH IN KANSAS TRAIN WRECK

PASSENGER, EXPRESS MESSENGER AND A NEWSBOY VICTIMS OF DISASTER.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Feb. 14.—St. Louis and San Francisco passenger train No. 118, northbound, was wrecked at Columbus, Kan., to-day.

Harry Roundtree of Fort Scott, the express messenger, one passenger and a newsboy, names unknown, were burned to death.

George Woods, the engineer, was badly hurt and W. F. Runyan, the fireman, sustained a broken leg.

The passenger train ran into a string of box cars that had broken loose from a freight train, and run back down on to the main line.

The entire passenger train, except the sleeper, was burned.

ARREST CONRIED TO TEST SUNDAY LAW

Great Strke of Miners Seems Imminent; COAL TRUST DEFIANT

Operators' Ultimatum In Fact Is "We Will Not Yield ne Point."

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—With every salient point of the demands of th 400,000 employes before them, the executive mining employers are defiant defy, their attitude is "Strike when y are ready. We will not yield a point." Practically, it is now feared, this strike means a strike which will tie up the coal regions for months.

The principal demands of the miners for an eight hour day, a ten per cent increase of wages, and full recognition by the scale committee, and President John Mitchell has approved them. The cis, therefore, is at hand.

Say Operators Will Reject Deman,

These demands will be formally laid fore the employers within a day or An early answer of complete rejecti is expected. One thing on which the operators is based is the fact that the employers declare they have 9,000,000 tons anthracite now mined and waiting; thereby force they can afford to fight.

The miners' Scale Committee is still in session to-day to pass upon several minor matters. The main points on which they fight is to be waged are settled, approved and engrossed. The employers have also held a conference of the situation and frankly expect the strike to come. They are making arrangements accordingly. They point out that it can only be useless, however, because there are 400,000 of the miners and their fund is only about $6,000,000, not enough to permit them to make a long fight.

PLAN FOR BITTER FIGHT.

Thus, in well-informed circles, it seems now almost inevitable that John Mitchell

BLACK HAND' BLOWS UP RICH MAN'S HOME

EXPLOSION FOLLOWED HIS DISREGARD OF 3 BLACKMAIL LETTERS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The front of the house occupied by John D'Lessio and his family, at No. 154 Twentieth street, Brooklyn, was blown out early to-day by a dynamite bomb which had been placed in the hallway. All the occupants escaped injury, but the neighborhood was thrown into a panic.

D'Lessio, who is a wealthy Italian, recently received three letters demanding $2,000 under penalty of death. The police believe that the explosion to-day was the work of members of the "Black Hand" society. There is no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage, but letters in the possession of the police are expected to lead to arrests.

D'Lessio is the head of the St. John's day lodge of Italians in Brooklyn. The third is the St. Michael's day organization, and for a long time there has been a bitter war between the two bands.

Since the receipt of the last letter D'Lessio has not allowed one of his children out of his home, night or day, and the police have watched constantly.

The explosive was placed in the hallway about 2:45 a. m. John Reiner, a baker, living in the neighborhood, saw a man running away. The baker watched the man run to a fire alarm box a block away and turn in the alarm. Then the man sped on and disappeared in the darkness.

Roundsmen Rooney and Madden and three policemen were sent to see what the fire was and were passing near by when the explosion came, taking them off their feet and hurling them into the street.

The members of the D'Lessio family were soon rushing from the upper floors, screaming. The firemen came, and the neighborhood was aroused.

JEWEL THEFT

Medford Robber Accidentally Started Blaze Which He Extinguished, Then Completed Looting of House—B. F. Haines the Victim

Jewels and money aggregating an intrinsic and sentimental value far greater than that secured in any robbery in Medford for many years have been stolen by a burglar from the home of Benjamin F. Haines of Central avenue, Glenwood district. One remarkable feature of the robbery was the fact that the burglar inadvertently set fire to the house, stopped to extinguish the blaze, and then resumed his looting.

Had the thief not been considerate enough to risk capture in order to put out the flames the house with all its contents might have been destroyed. As it is it was looted of every piece of jewelry and other small valuables while in actual cash he secured about $100 from several pocketbooks and by searching the clothing of the occupants of the house.

A list of the articles stolen, as made known to the police of Medford to-day, is as follows:

$100 in money, principally bills.
Stick pin set with garnets and pearls.
Solitaire diamond ring, valne $75.
Wemen's garnet ring.
Bow-knot stick pin, set with diamond.
Hand carved gilded brooch.
Valuable opal ring.
Clover leaf stick pin.
Horseshead stick pin.
Ring set with three turquises.
Plain wedding ring, engraved inside "Lee to Nan."

In addition to these jewels the thief got away with three gold collar and cuff buttons, a large gilt clock, gold watch fob, and a host of smaller things such as razors, mere-baum curios, silver plate and cigar holders.

Passed Burglar at Door.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines and Charles Bly, Mr. Haines' father-in-law, had been out for several hours. When they were returning, and almost at the door of their house they passed a man who they now believe to be the thief. He was about five feet six inches tall, weighed 155 pounds, clean shaven, dark complexion and wore a dark suit with a light overcoat. This description is now in the hands of the police.

Entering the house all three of them smelled smoke and hurriedly made an investigation. They traced the odor to the back of the house, where they found several umbrellas and other things in the size, soaked in water. Further investigation showed that there had been a robbery. It appeared that the thief had struck a match and set re to the umbrellas and searched the building a little. He took the pains to put out the fire and then continued his labors.

Bureau drawers were pulled out and ransacked, the pockets of practically every garment in the place were turned inside out and various objects were scattered all over the floor. It was only with the greatest difficulty that the list of missing objects was made up. The articles stolen were mostly heirlooms and therefore of greater sentimental than actual value.

Police Slow to Act.

For some reasons the Medford police did not immediately make known the fact that there had been a robbery. It became known to-day through Mr. Haines himself. Boston police have been asked to look out for the thief and have an accurate description of the missing articles. It is believed that the burglar came directly up from Boston from Medford.

Entrance to the house had been gained by the thief with a "jimmy." The marks where it had been used to pry open the kitchen door were plainly evident. Every indication is that the thief must have been in the house for several hours.

FAST MAIL IS WRECKED, FIVE TRAINMEN HURT

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 14.—The Missouri Pacific fast mail train, which left St. Louis at 3 a. m. to-day for Kansas City and the West, was wrecked on the steep approach of the bridge spanning the Gasconade at Gasconade, Mo., at 3 a. m. Three members of the crew and two mail clerks were injured. The train caught fire. Two mail cars were completely destroyed and one partially. Much valuable mail is also said to have been burned. Two other mail cars were thrown from the high embankment at the bridge approach into a ditch sixty feet below.

The train was made up of five mail cars and carried no passengers. Its schedule requires a high rate of speed, and it said the train was running close to sixty miles an hour when the engine struck a defect in the track and jumped the rails.

The wreck occurred at the place of the historic tragedy of five years ago, when the Gasconade bridge went down with a passenger train and twenty-eight or thirty prominent St. Louis citizens, who had gone out on a special to inspect the bridge, were precipitated into the river and drowned.

NEW COUNSEL FOR THE POLICE BOARD

Walter J. Mayers of No. 749 East Broadway, South Boston, has been appointed counsel to the Police Board. He succeeds Attorney John F. Perkins, who retired a few days ago. Counsel Mayers will be paid $2,500 a year in his new position. He is a Harvard graduate and studied law at the Y. M. C. A. evening school

ALDERMEN TAKE FIRST STEP FOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Call Upon E. J. Donovan to Name Committee to Investigate Question of Buying City Lighting Plant.

Municipal ownership scored an important victory in the Board of Aldermen yesterday when by a vote of eight to four it was decided to appoint a committee of seven to investigate the question of municipal lighting in Boston.

This committee will be appointed by City Clerk Edward J. Donovan, who by virtue of his position, there being no chairman of the Board elected, has this power. Mr. Donovan will announce the committee in a few days. Mr. Donovan believes that Boston should have a municipal lighting plant.

The order asking for the appointment of the committee was introduced by Alderman Frank Linehan who has been a consistent worker for the cause since it was first discussed in this city. The order reads:

That a special committee of seven members of the Board of Aldermen, to be appointed by the chair, to make a thorough and impartial examination, investigation and inquiry into the question of municipal lighting and the advisability of the city of Boston acquiring existing lighting plants in whole or in part, subject to the provisions of chapter 34 of the Revised Laws and of any act or acts in amendment thereof; said committee to report not later than September 1, 1906; any expense incurred to be charged to the appropriation for contingent expenses, Board of Aldermen.

The vote on this order was as follows:

Yes—Baldwin, Battis, Berwin, Brumberg, Hennessy, Kneeland, Linehan and Whelton—8.

No—Bangs, Bell, Curley and Draper.

Alderman Cauley was absent.

Curley Votes Against Order.

Alderman Jim Curley, who voted against the appointment of a committee to investigate the question, before his election pledged himself to the Municipal Ownership League to vote for a municipal lighting plant if he were elected. The councilmen of Ward 17, whom it is generally conceded he controls, dodged the vote on the question when it first came before them.

Early in the meeting Mr. Linehan had the following order, which is the one that Leo McCullough introduced in the council, laid on the table:

That the city of Boston be authorized and is hereby authorized, in accordance with the provisions of chapter 34 of the Revised Laws of Massachusetts, as amended by chapter 410 of the acts of the year 1905, to construct, purchase, or lease and maintain within its limits one or more plants for the manufacture or distribution of gas and electricity for furnishing light for municipal use, and light, heat and power, except for the operation of electric cars, for the use of inhabitants.

After Mr. Linehan had his order calling for the appointment of a committee of seven passed he had the order of which was laid on the table referred to the same committee. The committee is to report not later than September 1, so that the whole matter will be laid before the citizens of Boston before the next election, when municipal lighting will be the most important issue.

Labor Men Wage Earnest Fight.

The campaign has already been begun by the labor organizations of the city. On Friday evening there will be a meeting of the committee of twenty-five appointed by the Boston Central Labor Union to see how the committee voted regarding municipal lighting. The members of this committee were at the last meeting of the council, when the municipal lighting order was lost by the lack of six votes, although there were 44 in favor of it and only 15 against it. It required 50 votes to pass the order, two-thirds of the body.

All of the members of the council who made pledges that they would vote for a municipal lighting plant if elected, and who broke their pledges, will be discussed by the labor unions, and nothing will be left undone, should they ever come up for re-election, to defeat them.

At the meeting of the Central Labor Union on Sunday the whole matter will come up for discussion. The labor unions of Boston have decided to take a hand in politics, and hereafter only men will be supported by them who are considered reliable and who keep their ante-election promises.

MONOPOLY LODGE SENDS A FEW VALENTINES

COAL OPERATORS CONCEDE NOTHING

and "Divine Right" Baer will be pitted against each other again. If a strike does come the anthracite region will again go through those times of poverty and suffering which have characterized coal strikes in the past.

It can be stated on what seems excellent authority that the demands of the men are briefly these:

1—A trade agreement between the operators and the union which will be a full and complete recognition of the union.

2—A reconstruction of the present conciliation board, which was provided for by the anthracite commission award for the arbitration of differences between employer and employe in the region. Each of the three anthracite districts to have a separate and distinct conciliation board to arbitrate and settle its own disputes and differences. The composition of these conciliation boards to be determined by the operators in each district officers.

3—An eight-hour day for all classes of labor, skilled and unskilled, working in and about the mines.

4—A 10 per cent. increase in wages, without exception, to all classes of workmen and in all three districts, to include employes of the independent collieries as well as the coal carrying railroads.

5—A settlement of many minor grievances existing in the various classes of labor in the districts which the conciliation board has been unable to adjust under the award of the anthracite commission.

REAL ISSUE VEILED.

The owners have thrown down the gauge.

"We do not propose," said one after the conference, "to concede to the miners in any way. They are coming into the conference to demand an eight-hour day and recognition of their unions, among other things. It was shown clearly in the report of the anthracite strike commission in 1902 that the miners do not work eight hours a day. The claim, therefore, is only a disguised demand for a higher rate of pay, as was explained by Commissioner Wilcox, president of the Delaware & Hudson, when recently in John Mitchell.

"The Anthracite Commission also decided it was the right of the mine owners to employ either union or non-union men without discrimination.

"These are the two main points of the demand the miners' committee will make. Both have been decided by an eminent commission and the rulings have been adhered to strictly. The miners have no complaint to make; simply another demand.

"We have 6,000,000 tons of coal mined, which is a good reserve fund. The public therefore will not suffer if the strike comes this spring."

The formulation of the miners' demands was not effected without much difficulty and discussion among the thirty members of the anthracite miners' committee. The strength of these demands and the fact that the scale committee is a unit for their complete acceptance make the situation serious. While the members of the scale committee are hopeful, but few believe that the demands will be accepted in their present form.

President Baer of the Reading Company, and the leader of the anthracite operators, is unalterably opposed to union recognition. The operators take the position that under the recent award all demands were disposed of, and by the new ones have developed in the interim.

An agreement to continue operations after April under the award, with a reconsideration of the present conciliation board, would be acceptable to the operators.

Another demand on which the joint conference will split is the fourth demand, a 10 per cent. increase in wages. This demand is sweeping and general, and applies without reservation to all classes of labor in all three anthracite districts.

Will Oppose Increased Pay.

The increase will be strongly opposed by the operators in Districts Nos. 1 and 2, claiming as the basis of their objection that they are paying a much higher rate of wages to their employes than is paid for similar work done by those employed in the middle or No. 7 district.

Many of the operators believe that the wage scale might properly be adjusted in the middle district, especially in the independent collieries, to bring it up to the standard of that in the other districts. A general advance in wages, after such an adjustment, the operators say, could be met readily by all without injustice to the producer paying the highest rate of wages. The demand for the eight-hour day and the 10 per cent. increase, it is understood, will be met without difficulty.

ROCKEFELLER IN SON'S HOME AT POCANTICO

Process Server Palmedo Declares Oil King Concealed at John D. Jr.'s House.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—John D. Rockefeller has been found, according to M. E. Palmedo, the process-server who caught H. H. Rogers, and who has been for days trying to get service on him. But he hasn't served his subpoena yet.

According to Palmedo, the Oil King is hiding in the home of his son, the Bible class teacher, at Pocantico Hills.

Mr. Rockefeller has been at Pocantico uninterruptedly, it is said, since January 23, when he went up from New York, under cover of the night, sequestered in the mansion of his son, a quarter of a mile from his own home, thinkwaters to the process servers who have been camping out for three months at Tarrytown.

Pocantico Hills is an ideal hiding place. There are about 6,000 acres, with rolling hills, deep gullies, walls with unexpected woods and stone walls with unexpected turns. John D. Rockefeller has a modest sort of a home there—a very plain but roomy frame building, painted a dazzling yellow, resting on a base of fire red brick, which nestles snugly at the bottom of a gentle slope and is not easy to see from the public road.

From the house three macadam drives days run to the most remote corners of the estate. One of them, winding to the north, passes the home of John D., Jr., a mansion in the old French renaissance style, the gabled roof of which, surmounted by a tower, can be seen for miles around. Its approach is hedged with thick privet. Its approach is hedged with thick privet. Its approach is hedged with thick privet

TAFT PARTY'S GIFT PLEASES ALICE MOST

Miss Roosevelt Says She Will Wear Their Necklace Oftener Than Any Other Jewels.

AQUA MARINE PENDANT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The gift which has given Miss Alice Roosevelt the greatest pleasure and which, she declares, she will wear oftener than any other piece of jewelry, is the magnificent diamond and aqua-marine necklace sent by the Taft Philippines party, of which she and Mr. Longworth were members.

When Miss Roosevelt saw the gift she went into raptures over it. Then she called up one of the members of the party by telephone and said:

"Oh, it's such a perfect love. I know I will wear it oftener than any other piece of jewelry I have. How did you all think of such an exquisite thing?"

The gift is a pendant and necklace. In the pendant there are 120 small diamonds and eighteen larger ones are in the chain. In the centre of the pendant is a large aquamarine, diamond-shaped, and fully an inch across. The chain and mounting are of platinum and about the pendant are several hearts made of diamonds.

The gift was in a silver box, shaped like a trunk, containing one tray especially built for the necklace and other trays for other jewelry. The case is perfectly plain, bearing only Miss Roosevelt's initials.

Congressman Longworth's gift is a diamond necklace, each stone weighing three-quarters of a carat.

Invitation Reported Sold for $400.

The White House officials are greatly excited over a report that one of the invitations to the wedding has been sold for $400. The list of invited guests is being gone over, name by name, in an effort to pick out the particular person who may have been willing to sell an invitation and if the officials find what they are seeking the invitation will be cancelled at once.

The great number of gifts of enormous value has started everyone in Washington talking, for no one can estimate within $100,000 or $200,000 how much they are worth. In the embassies this is a general topic of conversation, for even at the courts of Europe such magnificent presents are seldom seen.

An effort was made to get one person in authority at the White House to make an estimate of the worth of the gifts, and he was asked if they were being overvalued.

"If you could see them all you wouldn't think they were overestimated," he said. "Why, I believe that millions is none too large to estimate their worth. They are coming from everywhere and streaming in by the dozens and dozens. I believe no one has ever received handsomer gifts in this country.

"I was here when Nellie Grant was married, in 1874, and the press at that time, enlarged on the wonders of her presents, and they were estimated at $80,000. We then thought that sum enormous, but there are at least half a dozen of Miss Roosevelt's gifts that are worth that much individually. But that was in the days before the trusts and modern finance were in vogue."

Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Bonaparte have sent a complete set of silver knives, forks and spoons in all shapes and sizes.

Mr. Grip, the Swedish Minister, sent a beautiful vase, and the Viscount de Chambrun has brought her a historic French fan of exquisite workmanship.

Quite a lot of amusement was furnished among the Ohio delegation over the telegram which the Ohio W. C. T. U. sent to Congressman Webber, who, it is said, objected to the delegation presenting to Mr. Longworth a loving cup on the ground of its intemperate use. The Ohio W. C. T. U. extended their congratulations to Mr. Webber, and said they would continue in their prayers for the rest of the Congressmen who had consented to the giving of such a gift.

"We don't want their prayers," said an irate member to-day, "but we would like that W. C. T. U. to understand that Mr. Webber never made any such slanderous reflections to our gift."

Congressman Longworth was honored by Speaker Cannon by being selected to preside over the house in committee of the whole.

When he walked up to take the gavel he was a bit nervous, but this quickly wore off, and after he had rapped the committee to order he was as steady as a veteran.

Longworth Boom.

Attorney-General Ellas of Ohio launched a boom for Congressman Longworth for Governor at the meeting of the Ohio Republican Club at Columbus.

Since his engagement to Miss Roosevelt and his break with Boss Cox of Cincinnati, Longworth has been hailed as a leader by Republicans of Southern Ohio.

Miss Roosevelt, as usual, drove Congressman Longworth to the capitol. She did not leave her carriage, but returned down town and visited several shops, making small purchases in each.

She dined at the White House and later went to Mrs. Townsend's, where there was an informal dance for young people.

In spite of the courteous statement made recently by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt relative to the invitations to the Longworth-Roosevelt wedding, some persons are still inclined to criticise the selection of guests, and it is rumored that the President's family who naturally would be asked had personally declined, presumably because they were offended. They are taking a broad-minded and sensible view.

The former Japanese minister, Mr. Takahira, has sent a message to the legation here forward to Miss Roosevelt a handsome cluster of flowers as a means of conveying to her the minister's congratulations.

The house committee on foreign affairs, of which Mr. Longworth is a member, has added another loving cup to those the young couple already have received. The cup is now in New York being engraved.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Morton have sent Miss Roosevelt a handsome dinner service of china. The pattern is a delicate pink.

FIERCE BLIZZARD IN WEST.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 14.—A blizzard which set in last night has to-day developed into by far the worst storm of the Winter and the train service of the State, except on the big lines, has been practically abandoned.

Charles Louis Tucker and King Alfonso of Spain are so nearly alike facially that they might be twins. Yet one is soon to die ignominiously in the electric chair, while the other is to crown his manhood by a wedding of most magnificent splendor.

STRIKING FACIAL RESEMBLANCE OF TUCKER, DOOMED TO DIE, AND KING ALFONSO, ABOUT TO WED

Profile of Tucker.

Three-quarter view of Alfonso.

Tucker's Mouth. Alfonso's Mouth.

CHARLES L. TUCKER AND KING ALFONSO.

In the eyes of the two men, too, there is a striking resemblance. Tucker's eyes are of a peculiar color, brown, yet at times having almost a greenish light in them. King Alfonso has the same eyes, soft with the languor of Spain which flows in his veins, yet dark and with a slight greenish cast.

The nose in Tucker's case is rather large and prominent; the nose of King Alfonso is remarkably large and prominent. He has the blood of the Hapsburgs. The ears in each case are normal and lying nearly are almost identical. The general coloring of the King is darker than Tucker's, yet the features are not alike. The King has, despite his blood, lighter hair than Tucker and the same short eyebrows.

Might Be Characters of Romance, Substituted in the Cradle With Futures Reversed.

Resemblance Is Carried Out in Years, in Appearance and in Many Other Respects.

One of the favorite themes of the romancer is the Prince, born in the purple to a kingdom and regal splendor, abducted as a child and raised to manhood and lordship and squalor in ignorance of his birth-right, while another—as imposter—succeeds to the honor which he ingloriously fits through some trick of resemblance or personality. But always the romance has the happy ending, the restoration of the legitimate scion of royalty to his own and the punishment of the imposter.

All this is preliminary to a little circumstance of real life, right here in Boston. Over in the East Cambridge jail there is a young man under sentence of death. He is charged with a heinous crime; he was found guilty of murder by a jury of his peers, and he was sentenced to die in the electric chair. He has fought as few men have fought for the boon of life, and it looks as if he had lost. His name is Charles Louis Tucker; his victim was Mabel Page.

Semblance and Contrast.

Now it just happens that amid the splendid gayeties of Biarritz at this particular time a young King is courting a Princess. He was born to the purple, a nation thunderously acclaimed his birth, a crown is his and all that goes with it. Not alone his own nation but the nations of all Europe and the world have done him honor. He is King Alfonso of Spain.

These are the two men who make one think involuntarily of the romancer's yarn of the Prince who was stolen and another person is substituted. The one thinks of the other. Charles Louis Tucker and King Alfonso of Spain are so nearly alike facially that they might be twins. Yet one is to die ignominiously in the electric chair; the other, already exalted, is to crown his manhood by a wedding whose splendor will be contributed to by all nations of the world. His bride will be Princess Ena of England.

Features Alike.

King Alfonso will be twenty-one years old in April of this year; Charles Louis Tucker is now twenty-three. He was arrested when he had just achieved his twenty-first birthday. They are both slender and they have both the characteristic of winning favor in the eyes of women despite the fact that they are not, strictly speaking, handsome men. But it is in the face that the strangest resemblance is found.

One of the most prominent features of Tucker is the aggressive chin with its heavy, pendulous lower lip.

King Alfonso's chin and lower lip might have been cast in the same mould. And it made a great "chin for" asked Interlocutor Clarke.

"What does the 'R.' stand for," asked Interlocutor Clarke.

"It stands for 'Roughhouse,'" was the reply.

CLUBMEN IN BURNT CORK SCORE A HIT

Best Yet of Annual Minstrel Shows Given by Colonial Club.

For originality, wit and general excellence the fourth annual minstrel show of the Colonial Club of Dorchester, which has just closed, was easily the best amateur minstrel performance given in this city for years. On each of the two nights of the show Winters Hall was crowded by the 250 members of the club and their friends, and the local and personal hits kept the audience in roars of laughter. For instance, here is one on A. W. Guptil, one of the tambos:

"What's your name?"

"Bert Guptil.

"Before or after 11 p. m.?"

"Well, or after."

Thus was all the answer.

The managers of the performance reasoned that a hit on some member of the club who was known by almost everyone present would prove a greater success than one on any national character, however well known, and results showed that they were right. The atmosphere of clever fun made the show by far the most successful of the four that the club has given.

Many Good Singers.

The performance also disclosed the fact that many of the members of the club can sing and sing well. Among the best numbers were "Who's There?" by A. W. Guptill; "Nobody," by E. H. Tongas; and "Rufus Johnson," by J. R. Armington. Edwin R. Clarke as the interlocutor, and George E. P. Russell, also scored decided successes.

One of the jokes which created enough merriment to satisfy Low Dockwader or George Thatcher was supposed to refer to the percent of one of the minstrels. One of the tambos said: "Is the wife who has really professional cleverness and selfishness told of how he wandered when his mother took her many umbrellas out after half of her home had pinched them elsewhere.

"Are you afraid someone will steal them?" the minstrel son asked.

Forty Members in Show.

"No. I'm afraid someone will recognize them." the primitive mother replied.

One of the jokes which "went" best was a question asking the "real name" of a minstrel. After the victim admitted had replied, the interlocutor asked him:

"What is your name when you're sober?"

One joke along these lines referred to James E. Armington. He was asked to tell the assemblage his real name, and he told it:

"Jim."

R. H. WHITE TO LAY LINOLEUM ON WARSHIPS

Boston House Wins Contracts to "Floor" Battleships for Uncle Sam.

Boston business men and Boston housekeepers even, will be interested in the announcement that a Boston dry goods firm has secured two handsome contracts to equip United States battleships with linoleum.

The first contract, already carried out, was to equip the battleship Rhode Island, which has just been completed at Fore River and accepted by the Government experts. This contract alone was taken at a figure close to $10,000. The new contract, awarded since the completion of the old one, is for linoleum of the same grade and quality for the battleship New Jersey, now under construction. The dry goods house securing the contracts, against considerable competition, was the R. H. White Company.

Outlast the Ship Itself.

It may seem strange to a housewife who buys linoleum to cover her kitchen floor and hallways, that this material is needed on the huge fighting ships of Uncle Sam's navy. But she must consider that the decks and passageways of a warvessel are constructed of steel and that will not do for a walking surface in time of peace or a fighting floor in time of battle.

Wood will not do. It splinters when hit by bullets. Carpet is obviously out of the question. It won't wear.

Linoleum of high grade will wear. It will even last longer than the ship itself. It does not splinter. And it affords firm foothold for the seasons.

Here's another interesting fact. Mrs. Housewife tacks her linoleum to the kitchen floor if she wishes it to be a permanent fixture. But you can't drive tacks into a steel deck. So on the battleships they stick it down with cement that holds it tighter than any tacks ever could.

Hard Puzzle to Solve.

It's quite a problem to figure on a contract of this kind on account of the great quantity of space to be covered and the various shapes and sizes of the different floor spaces. There are the floors of the main deck, the gun deck, including the admiral's and captain's quarters; the berth deck and petty officers' quarters, the ammunition passages and the barbettes.

AMALGAMATED PAYS HEINZE $25,000,000

Buys Up All His Mines, Settling 120 Law Suits, Amounting to $400,000,000.

COPPER MEN HERE HAPPY

The war of F. Augustus Heinze of Montana against Standard Oil, as represented by the Amalgamated Copper Company, has come to an end. Heinze has sold all the properties for which he has been battling in the courts for five years to his avowed enemy—Amalgamated. Boston copper market assumed a joyous aspect when the news was received and Boston copper men are happy.

The price paid was $25,000,000. Heinze says this was paid for the disputed mining properties in Montana, over the possession of which 120 lawsuits have been filed, aggregating damages of $400,000,000. Those suits still pending in the courts will now be dismissed. With all of the old disputes cleared up and with the purchase money in his hands Heinze will seek new copper mines, fresh victories in the world of finance, where he has already worried the master of Standard Oil, Henry H. Rogers, as that man has seldom been worried before.

Included among the properties turned over were the Minnie Healy, Rarus, Corra, Belmont, Nipper, Johnstown, and the interests of the Hyperion Mining Company, the Guardian Mining Company and the Montana Ore Purchasing Company and the these interests are a number of properties not now producing, as well as producing mines and a smelter.

Thomas F. Cole is taking the title to the properties, which will be transferred to a new company, in which the Amalgamated Copper Company, the North Butte Mining Company and the United Copper Company interests will be associated.

The various superintendents and foremen in the employ of Mr. Heinze and his companies were assembled in the office of the North Butte Company, and there gave possession of the properties, under them.

The purchasers are capitalists connected with the Amalgamated Copper Company, and the North Butte Mining Company. Thomas F. Cole, president of the Shiver Mining Company, the iron ore department of the United States Steel Corporation, who has become a leading copper figure in the Montana district, appeared as the purchaser of the various Heinze properties in the bill of sale filed in Butte.

CITIZENS TRY TO END LOCKOUT OF 1,500 MEN

They Hope to Settle the Granite Controversy in Quincy.

HOLD A MEETING TO-DAY

Special to the Boston American.

QUINCY, Feb. 14.—Practically the entire granite business of the city is at a standstill as a result of the lockout of 1,500 granite workers by the Granite Manufacturers' Association. The general business situation in the city has become so ominous that a committee from the Citizens' Association has taken upon itself an attempt to bring the locked out men and the manufacturers together to-day.

The committee from the Citizens' Association, made up of Henry L. Kincaide, Clarence Burgin and H. G. Smith, met the conference committee of the cutters at their headquarters in South Quincy to-day.

"The manufacturers have a large amount of work on hand, and cannot afford to keep their quarries closed long," said James Duncan, secretary of the Granite Cutters International Association. "This has been a remarkably open Winter, and there has been more activity in the quarries than ever before during the Winter time. This lock out of the cutters means a big loss to the manufacturers, and a corresponding loss to the men.

"The manufacturers have locked out the men on the flimsiest possible excuse. Because of one man, who manifestly was employed on a cutter's machine at wages lower than cutters' wages, and against the working agreement between the manufacturers and the union, the manufacturers lock out 1,500 men.

The lock out of the cutters has caused idleness of the teamsters, the tool sharpeners, and nearly every other class of labor connected with the quarries. The loss to the business men of the city is considerable, and for this reason they are taking a prominent position in the attempt to settle the matter.

Bernard F. Supple, clerk of the State Board of Arbitration has been here, looking over the situation with a view toward settling the dispute amicably.

JOIN HIM

By Frank K. Foster.

Beacon Hill will be true to its name to-night, and from its summit will blaze a warning signal to the hosts of labor of this old Commonwealth.

In other words, before the Committee on Labor of the Massachusetts Legislature a public hearing will be held upon two measures of vital importance, not alone to the labor associations of the State, but to every citizen who cares for the right of free speech and free intercourse with his fellows.

The first of these measures (House bill 38) introduced by Representative Jackson of Lynn, by request of the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, is commonly known as the "picketing bill." It has for its purpose the establishing of the legality of "peaceable persuasion" between interested parties in times of industrial disputes.

This is the fifth successive year this bill has been presented to the Legislature, usually meeting defeat in the Senate, the vote last year standing 20 to 15 with two pairs.

This year, however, the State Branch of the A. F. of L. has determined to make the measure an issue in the campaign, and has already obtained pledges from its membership, irrespective of party, of over 75,000 voters in the State, who will not vote for either senators or representatives who oppose the measure.

Intermediation Bill.

The second measure upon which the hearing is to be held is House Bill 217, better known as the "Intimidation Bill," introduced by Representative Stowe of Springfield, drafted, it is understood, by Attorney Dennison, the walking delegate of the Employers' Association of Springfield. The purpose of this bill is exactly the reverse of the "Picketing Bill. The phraseology of the bill is rather subtly conceived, for while all great stress is laid upon the word "intimidation," yet the bill itself defines the word to embrace any "threat to interfere with the business of any employer."

There is no shadow of doubt but that, if this bill becomes statute law, the penalty imposed for its violation, $50 for each offence, could be placed upon the most inoffensive striker who dared to enter into communication with any individual who had taken the place of any member of the trade union to which he belonged.

The issue between the two measures is thus sufficiently clear for all to perceive. The workingmen desire to maintain their constitutional right to free speech, seriously threatened already by judicial encroachment, while the employers' association would make it a crime for men to peaceably converse upon the street or in a shop or dwelling, providing a labor dispute was on between the parties.

Judicial Compression.

In one of the weird tales of Edgar Allan Poe the sensations are vividly described of a man who was imprisoned with an inquisitorial dungeon, whose walls steadily closed in upon the hapless prisoner. Inch by inch the space diminished, the victim conscious of his horrible and impending fate.

For the past ten years the force of judicial compression and construction against the scope of the associations of labor of the United States, from State after State have come decisions which, here pruning there, palsoning in another place, until a series of precedents has been established which has shocked eminent and conservative members of the legal profession and aroused the protest of the independent press. The danger line has already been passed. This has been publicly stated by the present Attorney General of the United States.

A few illustrations of the situation. The union printers are on strike for the eight-hour day. In Chicago Judge Holdom sentences two of the chief officials of the union to jail for thirty days for an alleged offence, the violation of an injunction. This is done without trial by jury, although the commission of the offence is denied. What is the remedy?

In New York the union printers are enjoined from even "advising" the non-union men, although the New York Sun, a paper commonly a most severe critic of organized labor, bears witness to the fact that no overt acts had been committed.

In Norwood an injunction of a similar nature has been issued, with no shadow of proof submitted that the union was in any way responsible for the alleged acts.

Is it to be marvelled at that organized labor says that it is time that its rights should be defined, and not left to the caprice of the judge?

The Stowe Intimidation bill at last throws off the mask and would throttle once and for all the voice of organized labor.

The Springfield master printers, it is asserted, have been advertising for non-union printers, with the object of trouble existing. Under the Stowe bill should the union printers of that city attempt to inform the men brought there under false pretenses to take their places of the true situation, they are liable to the penalty.

The union men of New England are men of peace. They are law abiding. They ask no protection from punishment when crime is committed. But they do protest, with all the vigor at their command, against the dastardly attempt now being made to deprive them of their legitimate rights.

They ask the fair minded workingmen of the city, the professional men of liberal outlook, the business men of far-sightedness, the press with untrammelled columns, to join them in this protest.

Let the State House be thronged to-night, that this protest may be visible and effective.

Be the leaders who shape the policies of political parties this word: You will never impose an intimidation bill upon the workingmen of Massachusetts. If you choose to attempt this policy, we will answer him the same way as the workmen of Great Britain have answered the Taff Vale decision, by forsaking party allegiance and sending men to make the laws who will maintain the natural and constitutional rights of the people against all odds.

200 TRADE UNIONS TO JOIN IN GREAT DEMONSTRATION

A living petition against the enactment of unjust legislation, 2,000 men will march to the State House this evening to appear in favor of the picketing bill, which provides for peaceable communication between those involved in industrial pursuits, and to oppose the Stowe amendment relating to the so-called intimidation of employes.

The parade will start from Wells Memorial Building, No. 987 Washington street, at 7.15 o'clock. Dennis D. Driscoll, secretary-treasurer of the State branch, American Federation of Labor, under the auspices of which the demonstration is held, will be in command. The route will be through Castle street, to Shawmut avenue, to Tremont st, to Boylston street, across Boston Common, to the State House. Two hundred trade unions will be represented. Every trades unionist in Boston and vicinity is urgently requested to take part in the parade. The paraders should be at Wells Memorial at 7 o'clock sharp.

The hearing will be held at Room No. 240, the largest at the State House. This room will be packed and the corridors thronged with workers. Every city and town in Massachusetts will be represented at the hearing. Labor's side of the case will be in charge of Frank K. Foster, chairman of the legislative committee of the State Branch, American Federation of Labor.

Out-of-town labor leaders will be heard first, in order that they may leave for home early. They include President Francis J. Clarke, of the State Branch, A. F. of L.; Vice-President Edward Cohen, of Lynn; John Golden, of Fall River, president United Textile Workers; William A. Grady, of Springfield, business agent of the Building Trades Council; President Frank Isaveron and Secretary William F. Clancy, Milford United Textile Union; Alderman C. J. Carmody, Worcester; T. J. Dornan, Holyoke; P. Maloney, Lawrence, A. F. of L. organizer; Representative Samuel Ross, New Bedford; Austin Keavery, Waltham central Labor Union, and M. J. Collins, president Cambridge Central Labor Union.

Besides Mr. Foster, the local speakers will include Secretary-Treasurer D. D. Driscoll, of the State Branch, A. F of L., and Alderman Fred J. Kneeland, of Painters' Union.

LEADERS CALL ON LABOR TO JOIN BIG DEMONSTRATION

"Let every trade unionist in Boston and vicinity march this evening to protest by his presence against this attack at the very foundation of organized labor."—Martin T. Joyce, President Central Labor Union.

"Thousands of workers should be in line to-night as a living petition against government by injunction."—Alderman Fred J. Kneeland of Painters' Union No. 11."

"It is time for trades unionists to be up and doing when a powerful corporate influence seeks to enact legislation which will make it impossible to speak to a man who 'scabs' on them."—Dennis D. Driscoll, Secretary-Treasurer, State Branch, A. F. of L.

"On to the State House! Comrades, let every trades union have delegates in line to-night. Show this gentleman (Representative Stowe) that we are not Helots yet."—Henry Abrahams, Secretary Central Labor Union and Secretary Cigarmakers' Union.

"If organized labor and the community as a whole are awake to the dangers which shorten human liberty through this assumption of authority, there will be a tremendous gathering at Wells Memorial to-night to protest against government by injunction."—Henry Sterling, Secretary Typographical Union.

Straight Talks on Patent Medicines

The "Rexall" Remedies deserve confidence.

As all these remedies are grouped under one name, they must succeed or fall together. There must be no weak links in this chain. One unworthy remedy would mean disaster to the entire plan. If you, for example, purchased the "Rexall" Cough Cure and were not cured by it, how could we expect you to place any faith thereafter in the "Rexall" Dyspepsia Cure or any other member of the "Rexall" family?

You can understand, therefore, why such anxious care was given to finding and choosing the remedies to which the name "Rexall" was given. We have admitted none to this circle until our committee of experts had been convinced by investigation and test that it was the best remedy known to medical science for the ailment it aimed to relieve.

Who should know better than the leading thousand druggists of this country what are, and what are not, efficient medicines?

Remember, the success of our enterprise depends on the merit of each individual remedy. Our reputation, which is our very business existence is at stake. Can you doubt, that in buying a "Rexall" Remedy, you are buying the best that science and experience can give you?

Here are three prominent members of the "Rexall" family:

REXALL "93" HAIR TONIC

The famous Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is composed in chief of Resorcin, Beta Naphthol and Pilocarpin.

Resorcin is one of the latest and most effective germ-killers discovered by a science, and in connection with Beta Naphthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which not only destroys the germs which rob the hair of its nutriment, but creates a clean and healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the lodgment and development of new germs.

Pilocarpin is a well-known agent for restoring the hair to its natural color, where the loss of color has been due to a disease of the scalp. It is not a coloring matter or dye—it produces its effect by stimulating the scalp and hair follicles to health and active life.

This combination of curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant, perfects the most effective remedy for hair and scalp troubles known to-day.

Per Bottle, 50c.

FOR CATARRH—MUCU-TONE

The chief ingredients of Mucu-Tone are Gentian, Cubebs, Cascara Sagrada, Glycerine, and Sarsaparilla.

Gentian is recognized in medicine as one of the greatest tonics ever discovered. It is the foundation on which Mucu-Tone is built. Gentian combines in high degree the tonic properties of all the known "bitters," with none of the disadvantages applying to them.

Cubebs has long been recognized as a specific in the treatment of all catarrhal conditions. Its action is prompt and its benefit almost invariable. In whatever part of the body the inflamed or catarrhal condition of the mucous membrane exists, the use of Cubebs has been recommended by the best physicians for many generations.

Cascara Sagrada is especially introduced for its necessary laxative properties.

The combination of these with Glycerine and Sarsaparilla makes Mucu-Tone a remedy that attacks catarrh from every point, gradually restores and rebuilds the diseased tissues to their former health and strength, promotes digestion and creates a normal appetite. Bottle, 50c.

CHERRY JUICE COUGH SYRUP

A new idea in Cough Syrups.

This preparation owes its efficiency to the presence of Wild Cherry, Vinegar Squills, Boneset, Horehound and Syrup.

All of these have been known for a hundred years as remedies for coughs and hoarseness.

In Rexall Cherry Juice Cough Syrup, all of these remedies have been combined by a process of manufacture that has blended them into a perfect medicinal harmony whereby the characteristics of each support and reinforce the others.

The pathological properties of each ingredient does its own particular work in easing the inflamed membranes, loosening the phlegm and setting up a condition of health in the bronchial and nasal passages.

One spoonful will relieve the very inflamed membranes and temporarily stop the cough. One bottle will work a cure. It is exceedingly pleasant to the taste—children like it. Per Bottle, 25c.

Look for this Rexall Guarantee on each package: "This preparation is guaranteed to give satisfaction. If it does not, come back and get your money. It belongs to you, and we want you to have it."

America a Nation of Dyspeptics.

It is said that America is a nation of dyspeptics and that indigestion is simply the advance agent of dyspepsia. We are firmly convinced that a great deal of indigestion would be avoided if those having poor digestion would take even a small quantity of Graves' Maryland Malt Whiskey—say a table spoonful with water and sugar—either before, after or with meals, as seems most agreeable. A careful chemical analysis shows that this malt whiskey is absolutely pure and can do only good to those who use it. Its mild ness makes it pleasant and agreeable to the taste, while its tonic and nutritive qualities strongly commend it to all those whose digestive apparatus is weak and in need of a gentle stimulation. It is put up only in full-sealed quarts, containing twenty-five per cent more whiskey than those bottles which measure five to the gallon. It is well to bear this in mind when considering the relative cost of the genuine, Graves' Maryland Malt Whiskey. You ought to be able to get Graves' Malt at licensed dealers, grocers and druggists.

MISS READEL WARNS GIRLS IN LOVE; READS LESSON IN HER OWN EXPERIENCE

Tells Her Own Story of Blighted Future and Struggle Before Her For Her Baby's Sake.

Young Mother Who Won $10,000 Verdict For Broken Troth Sees Lesson For Others.

Behind the verdict for $10,000 won by pretty Jennie C. Readel of Norwood against Adam C. Bock of Walpole, the tragedy of a wrecked life, the half of which has not been told. With her own future blighted and with her baby to be cared for, Miss Readel points out the awful warning to be drawn from her own case by other girls.

To-day, in the BOSTON AMERICAN,

"I see much bitterness and regret and a hard uphill existence, but I will bear it without a show of existence for baby's sake."

"I was only fifteen when I began to love him. How could I suppose it possible that he would deceive me?"

she supplements her story told on the witness stand in the sensational suit in which she asked $50,000. The verdict was for $10,041, one of the largest ever given in Massachusetts, but it is particularly gratifying to her for the sake of her fatherless little one.

"I hope this will be a lesson to other young girls to trust no man blindly," she told a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN immediately after the finding of the jury was made known. I was told, too, at that time when the future was all rosy, when from fifteen to almost half seventeen years, she lived with one idea—that of becoming Bock's wife.

The tragic story was only hinted at in the testimony the girl gave on the witness stand in this sensational suit. There were produced the letters, breathing the spirit of adoration, which Bock wrote to her. Miss Readel supplemented the court story when seen by a reporter at the home of her parents, No 28 Phillips avenue, Norwood.

Glad for Baby's Sake.

"I am so glad for my baby's sake," she exclaimed when the result of the finding was made known to her. "I believe that Mr. Bock will see now that he cannot have his own way entirely. When he had always professed to love me so deeply, his change of heart in the last year is still incomprehensible. His action has been without reason. It seems a wasted life for me. But I will bear it. I have got to bear it, and he, too, shall bear some small share of it. The court has said so, and I repeat it.

"I will follow this matter right up to the end of time if need be, and I will tell you why. I was fifteen years of age when I began to love him. I knew there was no other, and there was no future that did not include him. All that I could see was to grow older, plan for a home and marry him. This thought was predominant all ways and overshadowed every other. I looked with the eyes of girlhood.

"And then came the awakening. How could I suppose it possible that he would deceive me? If he had said that snow was blue I would have believed it. My folks made no objection to him, and his folks were very fond of me. To the very last visit I made them they urged and pleaded with him to marry me. My mother and I called upon his mother. She said she dearly wished we would marry at once. I couldn't see with normal eyes even then, but now—perhaps too late—I have awakened.

"I hope it will be a lesson to other young girls to trust no man blindly. Those of more experience say that the one who was false to a man would desert me as he did. We tried to make him say so, but, as I, seems to me, he was just hard headed and hard hearted.

"Do I know if he has the money to pay? Well, I haven't thought of that. He has or has not he still be punished just as surely. My baby must be supported. Wherever he goes he will have to provide for little Helene. I am told that this will hang over him for years and that he can not escape the consequences.

Were Always Together.

"Has he property? I am sure I do not know. I have heard he owned a share of a farm and certainly he makes good pay. They discharged him from his position in Norwood, where he earned more than $20 a week, when they heard about our affair. I have been told he intended to take a similar position in New York.

"He talk about $8 a week on a farm is for effect. He has told friends that he expected to get off for a few hundred and would settle and live free. You see that he has reckoned without the law and without us.

"Adam and I were always together. He spent his Sundays with me and we attended amusements together right along. Not a doubt of him ever crossed my mind. The future was always a pretty picture, with Adam in the centre of it. I never left all out from how I loved him.

"But I was changed now. Perhaps because I am a woman and not a trusting girl. I see much bitterness and regret and a hard uphill existence. But I will bear it without a show of weakness. And I will give him cause to remember."

The tears were flowing by this time but there was resolve and almost defiance in her every attitude. She took from the arms of her mother the little tot who has brought the change into her life. It is a beautiful little girl, intelligent and winsome. Baby laughed saucily and snuggled its head upon a shoulder with arms wrapped lovingly about its youthful mother's neck.

Terrible to Bear Later.

"She is worth much suffering, but it will be terrible to bear later in life," sobbed the young mother, kissing and stroking the baby.

Miss Readel was born and raised in Norwood. After graduating from the grammar school she worked in the Pilmpton Binder, where, at the age of fifteen, she learned to love Adam C. Bock. They worked together and their lives soon almost lived together until the change came.

Adam Bock belongs in Walpole, where he spent two years in the high school after leaving the graded schools. He was a well known amateur bicycle rider, and won many prizes in middle distance track and road races. Both had a host of friends, and not a word was raised against either previously to the recent developments.

Frederick Readel, father of the girl, is a hard-working man of simple life and straightforward manner. Mrs. Readel is a motherly woman of middle life. A brother devotes his spare time to painting, and there is also a young sister of seventeen.

FELL 4 STORIES; PICKED UP DEAD

Cured Falling from the roof of the Walton N. Logan shoe factory at the corner of Spruce and Beard streets, Chelsea, Edwin Morse of Lynn, a carpenter, employed by Kelley & Co., contractors, was instantly killed today.

Logan had been ordered to repair the gutter running along the edge of the roof and because of snow which clung to the outer of his feet he lost his balance and fell four stories to the ground.

His body was removed to Hearn's undertaking rooms.

MRS. "JACK" GARDNER A JIU JITSU EXPERT

Her Proficiency May Lead Boston Society Into Japanese Athletics.

HAS A NIPONESE TEACHER

Any burglar who invades the Fenway Palace or any other place where Mrs. "Jack" Gardner is domiciled is likely to be jarred by contact with the ceiling, floor or walls of the apartment, after following a parabolic course through intervening atmosphere.

He will not have to fall into the hands of any gilant to meet with such a misadventure. Mrs. Jack herself is believed now to be equal to the stunt of tossing a marauder around like a bunch of wilted violets. She has taken no ordinary course of physical culture to attain power that would seem uncanny to any midnight robber. He could take his own part with a husky man who tried straight holds and half Nelsons. But to have a lady of such graceful figure lay a soft, gentle hand on his coat collar and lift him with great velocity into a tangent over her head would provide a nervous shock for even a Bill Sykes of the coarsest fibrilles.

Mrs. Jack is an expert at jiu jitsu. This is said to be the verdict of Cold Chrysanthemum, the wiry Japanese professor of the Nipponese wrestling art, who has come into the ken of Boston society by serving as her instructor. It is understood that it has been repeated at musicales and pink teas that Chrysanthemum has proclaimed the society leader very proficient.

Jiu jitsu is a style of wrestling where the assailant is bolsted, thrown, tossed, twisted and crushed just by the impetus of his own attack. The mistress of jiu jitsu can, with a twist of the fair, slender wrist, give her assailant such a stunt that he will, after recovering consciousness, be will feel, after recovering consciousness, as if he had fallen out of a balloon.

Now that Mrs. Jack has become an adept at this branch of athletics, it is expected that all the ambitious society girls in town will study jiu jitsu until it becomes a fad of the Boston elite.

Wrestling matches might be made a feature of Vincent Club entertainments and it is not impossible that padded walls of Back Bay parlors may yet testify to the popularity of the sport.

ROOSEVELT AND LODGE FALL OUT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The President and Senator Lodge have fallen out over the rate bill. The man from Massachusetts is no longer "the mouthpiece of the White House."

It came about through the Senator taking the position that the right of review of the rate fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission should be had before the rate becomes effective.

The President, it is now declared, wants the rate to be valued and operative within thirty days, and that the right to review, without having to go together until the change came.

CHURCH WINE ADULTERATED

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—"Dishonest dealers are administering large quantities of the communion wine that is sold to the churches of this city," says Health Commissioner Darlington.

"Aniline dye, wood alcohol and cider are used, and I propose to stop the practice by making immediate arrests.

"An unrelenting campaign against those who sell adulterate food products will be inaugurated, and wholesale arrest made within a short time.

"While the condition of the milk is better than ever before, countless frauds are being constantly discovered. We learned only recently that aniline dye was being used to color sausage."

Montana Coal and Coke Co.

February 9, 1906.

To the Stockholders of the Montana Coal and Coke Co.

Gentlemen:—Under date of February 7, 1906, you have received through your Directors a proposition made by J. A. Coram, for the exchange of your stock for the stock of the American Consolidated Copper Company, upon the terms described in Mr. Coram's letter, a copy of which is hereto attached.

The Directors and some of the large stockholders thus far seen think it very wise that this proposition should be accepted, and have already deposited upward of 70,000 shares with the Federal Trust Company. The Trust Company is prepared now to deliver to you convertible receipts for your certificates, and we would advise the exchange.

Respectfully submitted, per order of the Board of Directors,

E. L. White, Pres.

PROPOSITION FOR EXCHANGE OF STOCK.

To the Board of Directors of the Montana Coal and Coke Co.

Gentlemen:—I hereby make the following offer to the Stockholders of the Montana Coal and Coke Company through you: I will exchange one share of the American Consolidated Copper Company stock for each eight shares of the Montana Coal and Coke Company stock, provided a majority of the shares can be acquired for exchange on or before the 17th day of February, 1906, for the purpose of carrying out this offer, the Stockholders of the Montana Coal and Coke Company may deposit their stock with the Federal Trust Company, 95 Milk Street, Boston, and receive therefor, negotiable receipts in exchange satisfactory to the Boston Stock Exchange.

The American Consolidated Copper Company has been organized under the laws of the State of Maine with a total authorized capital of $150,000,000, divided into 1,500,000 shares of the par value of $100 each.

The first issue will be 365,000 shares, or a total of $36,500,000, and no additional stock can be issued for less than its par value, $100 per share.

The Company will have in its Treasury a cash working capital of $5,000,000, and will own a very large group of copper mines in the centre of the mineral district of Butte, Montana, including the properties known as the Davis Estate Mines, and the Daly Mining Company's Mines of the Estate of the late Marcus Daly.

These properties have been [illegible] upon for the American Consolidated Copper Company by [illegible]ain C. H. Palmer, E. H. Wilson, Capt. Ben Tibby, Capt. Dan [illegible] Vichie and Carrol H. Hand. Their reports are exceedingly favorable, and show net earnings on a production of 4,000 tons a day of $7,407,150 per annum, which is equal to 20% earnings on the $36,500,000 to be issued.

An early reply will greatly oblige,

Yours very truly,

J. A. Coram.

THREATEN HALL, RECEIVER OF PROVIDENT BANK

Shenandoah Irrigation Officials Say They Will Throw Boston Man Into the Street.

SEEKS DEPOSITORS' MONEY

Receiver Alfred S. Hall of the Provident Securities and Banking Company is to be thrown into the street if he attempts to take possession of the offices of the Shenandoah Irrigation and Land Company when he arrives in Denver. This is the intimation given by Roderick A. Gurley, brother of Charles D. Gurley, according to dispatches to-day from Denver to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Receiver Hall does not seem particularly worried over the prospect, however, as he still says he will go to Denver and will be there some time next week.

Formal announcement has been made in Denver of the transfer of the Gurley interests in the Shenandoah Company. Gurley's men have been succeeded on the Board of Directors by Dillon C. Willoughby and Charles B. Francis. The Gurley holdings are said to have been turned over to the Credit Bank and Securities Company, limited, of London.

It is believed in Denver that there will be an interesting legal battle between the Shenandoah men and Receiver Hall. The former say they are not at all worried by Receiver Hall's statement of the action they intend to take in regard to invalidating some of the bond issues of the company.

THRILLING RESCUES AT EARLY BLAZES

that the old folks were not in sight, and rushing frantically back he found them lying at the head of the stairs unconscious from the smoke. Taking first one and then the other in his arms he carried them out of the building to safety.

Meanwhile the Phippe family on the second floor, consisting of Arba Phippe, his wife and five children—Grace, twelve; Mary, ten; Annie, eight; Albert, five, and Walter, three—had been aroused, and the elder of the children had ventured down the stairway. The rest of the family could not stand the smoke. The father gathered his family in the front room to await the arrival of the firemen. Charles Cuttlercorn, who was alone on the top floor, had made his escape by breaking through the sky light and lowering, scantily clad, into a neighboring house.

Deputy Chief Grady found the Phippe family hanging from the second story window almost on the point of jumping. The Chief dashed through the smoke and up the two long flights of stairs to prevent the family from jumping unless it became absolutely necessary. Ladders were raised to the windows, and Chief Grady passed the mother and children out to the waiting firemen, who carried them to the ground. The Chief himself was the last to leave.

At the fire at No. 96 West Concord street, John Hamilton, nineteen years old, of No. 17 Hamilton street, Charlestown, who was passing and saw smoke pouring out of a third-story window of the house, ran into the building, found Mrs. J. F. Hosmer and Mrs. William Smith in the burning apartment, both nearly overcome by smoke. He sought to carry the fainting women to the smoke-filled stairways but failed. He was able to rouse a window with them, where the figures attracted the attention of policeman below, who carried the three persons from the house. The fire, the cause of which is unknown, caused a damage of several thousand dollars to the building and its contents.

The third fire of the night was at No. 1100 Washington street, where a mattress in the janitor's room of the tenement house threatened was the cause of a severe blaze. All of the tenants in the house escaped.

The Shawmut avenue fire was in a lodging house. It is conducted by Mrs. J. F. Hosmer. She, Mrs. William Smith and John Hamilton were found unconscious from smoke and carried to the street.

PREPARE TO FIGHT IN CHINA

Special to the Boston American.

NEWPORT, R. I., Feb. 14.—Three companies of coast artillery stationed at Fort Adams have orders to prepare to move at a moment's notice. No one at the post knows what it means, and in view of talk of trouble in China and the possible dispatch to that country of United States troops there is much excitement among the men.

The orders are to have every man equipped with a complete field outfit and a brown khaki uniform throughout.

TO CONFER ON SUBWAY BILL

Mayor Thurston of Cambridge has invited the Public Franchise League and other interested parties to meet in his office tonight to confer on the subway bill submitted to the Legislature several weeks after he granted office on a petition signed by Mayor Daly, his predecessor. Mayor Thurston was not consulted in the composition of the bill.

Mayor Thurston objects to the surplus excavation material clause, and the time conditions for building a Cambridge street railway.

Some members of the Public Franchise League think that the bill should be submitted to a referendum vote in Cambridge.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES LABOR COUNCIL OF GREATER BOSTON 96

One of the largest and most sensational meetings ever held by the Central Labor Union will take place next Sunday, when the report of the committee of twenty-five on the municipal ownership of gas and electric lighting will make its report on the action of the Councilmen to date.

Delegate D. Driscoll, chairman of the committee of twenty-five, will report for the committee. He will handle without gloves the Councilmen who broke their pledges or dodged the issue. A committee of the Common Council will be present and followed closely the meeting. Each member, Aldermen Prince, Coffey, Hurley and others will join in the condemnation of those Councilmen who deceived the people who elected them.

The report of the committee of twenty-five will be held Friday evening in Central Labor Union building to complete its report to be presented to the Central Labor Union Sunday afternoon.

STEAMFITTERS TALK STRIKE.

Charging that engineers are doing steam fitters work on the extension of the No. 2 subway, Steamfitters' Union No. 109 in the Stationary Engineers' building, Washington street, last night discussed the question of a strike. The union has called the attention of the Stationary Engineers' Union No. 16 to the matter, but that union has not as yet taken any action. A committee was chosen to present the case to the Central Labor Union next Sunday.

SAFE BLOWING PLANNED HERE?

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 14.—Sheriff M. M. Collis has been notified to-day by the police of different cities for pictures and descriptions of the unknown bandit, held for the murder of Giuseppi Glampa and the Dover safe blowing.

The Fitchburg police sent a picture of Emery Pratt of that city, who had an assault with weapons on an officer. The photograph is not, however, that of the unknown crook. The police of Bennington have asked for pictures in any way the description is similar to a crook who is wanted for train wrecking in that vicinity.

Two of the Newburyport police tried to identify the unknown as a man who, when surprised in a house, fired at the owner and escaped. There is no by your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

DYSPEPSIA-PROOF.

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed By Any Stomach.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will lie in being able to stand the flash.

It was only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting 1208 to face at a two-by-four table, he handed his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Boston Clam Chowder.
Strained Honey.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms.
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Oc Dinkey with Sauerkraut.
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Combination Fruit Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered "a little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company."

But Mr. White could not be deceived: "I am sorry you can't enjoy the feast, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it? You look as if you had hungry look anyhow as long as you have dyspepsia. Now listen. My stomach was in bad and bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia business is robbing you of your spirit, of your energy and ability to think quickly. It can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now I'll tell you what to do," and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There's there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food, or even the worst dyspeptic it's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason it relieves the stomach so nearly all the work it has to do, digests everything in the stomach and stimulates the gastric juices to get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package."

Yes, it is true, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest the food you eat, cure indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and gas after meals, nausea, headache and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the nourishment there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

MINORS MAY HAVE OWN RULES

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—In spite of the apparent opposition of the National League there is a growing sentiment among baseball men now in this city favoring some change in the rules that will increase batting. The American League, through President Ban Johnson, has placed itself on record in favor of more hitting, and Clark Griffith, one of the members of the rules committee, has formulated a modification of the foul strike rule which he feels sure will bring about the desired result. Another American League man has also suggested that the number of called balls should be reduced from four to three, an arrangement which surely would lessen the effectiveness of the pitchers.

Rules Must Be Ratified.

The so-called Joint Rules Committee, which is supposed to consider all such changes, is made up of three members from each of the big major leagues—Griffith, Mack and Nixon from the American and Murphy, Hanlon and Dreyfuss from the National. It is the business of this committee to agree upon amendments to the playing code which must be afterward ratified by the leagues themselves.

A majority vote can carry any of these amendments in committee. But as the case stands at present, there will be a deadlock, no matter what suggestions may come up, for the reason that the committee representing the National League is opposed to any changes prompted by their opponents.

A few days ago the president of the National League went so far as to say that he did not believe his committee would meet the American until after the sessions of the two leagues were at an end, but such an act of discourtesy has been avoided by the announcement that the two committees will come together today. But unless there is a change of sentiment on the part of the National League men there will be nothing doing, so that this conference seems to be superfluous. The minor leagues, however, will not be controlled by petty jealousy, it appears, for one of their leading representatives, T. H. Murnane, said last night at the Fifth Avenue Hotel:

Minors to Go It Alone.

"We will go ahead and change the rules to increase batting, no matter what the attitude of the big leaguers may be. To us the three-foul rule looks to be the solution of the problem, although the abolishment of strike may be the thing instead. It seems a pity that the base ball rules cannot be overhauled without ill-feeling.

"There are twenty-six minor leagues banded together under the title of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. If they decide to change the playing rules they will get the major league organizations on their merits. They may also influence the American League to join them in the present crusade against weak batting. In which event the National League would be left in a rather odd predicament.

STAR HORSES TO RACE FOR $2,000 A CORNER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—All arrangements have been completed for a three-cornered match race between Sweet Marie 2:08¾, Wentworth 2:04¾ and Tiverton 2:04¾, three fastest trotters on the American list of to-day.

It did not take long for the representatives of these noted horses to get down to business, as each evidently believes that his equine is the superior of the other. Therefore it was decided that the match to the limit named in the challenges which has been published in the press—$2,000 a corner. This stake the owners agreed to collect after the contest the sum of $7,500.

To make the match binding each posted with a daily sporting paper in this city $500. Another deposit of $1,000 each will be made on June 1 as a reminder of an equal sum on the event previous to the race.

The race will attract the notice of the whole horse world, as never before have three trotters with such champion records been pitted against each other.

They are all now in the pink of condition, and, barring accidents, should train into better condition than ever before in their turf careers. With this in mind it will create the most remarkable national records—in all probability world's records for trotters in a race.

It is reported that already several managers of prominent eastern tracks have made overtures in favor of the race, but the parties interested have decided to wait until a later date, for the purpose of selecting a track the most convenient to the trotting horse public. Following are the conditions of the contract signed by the owners or agents:

This is an agreement entered into by John Heenehl, of New York, for J. McDonald, Albany, N. Y., and E. E. McCargo, Philadelphia, Pa., for a match race in which their horses, Tiverton, 2:04¾, Sweet Marie, 2:04¾, and Wentworth, 2:04¾, respectively, will be the contestants, under the following conditions:

1. The race will be for $2,500 a corner, to play or pay, winner to take all.

2. Each party hereto agree to deposit a forfeit of $500 with the New York Morning Telegraph to bind said contract. Of the remaining amount of $2,000 it should be deposited with the stakeholder as follows: $1,000 on or before midnight, June 1, 1906, and the balance $1,000 before 7 p. m. the day previous to the date of the race.

3. The race to take place during the month of July, never the first Monday, the 2d, and Saturday, the 21st.

4. The race must be one to be selected by mutual agreement, and announced on the day the second payment shall be made.

5. Race to be best two in three on the Vanderbilt plan, in case of a split heat, only the best winners to start in the third and deciding heat.

7. The race to be under the rules of the association of which the track agreed upon may be a member.

GRIFF JONES LOST BOUT

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 14.—Dave Hennessey of this place and Griff Jones of Philadelphia fought six rounds before the National Athletic Club. The first three rounds were fast. Jones was tired and was glad to reach his corner at the expiration of the fourth. In the fifth and fifth rounds Hennessey did all the forcing and easily had the better of the bout.

A FABLE OF STARLIGHT

BY TAD.

Once upon a time there lived a large dark man, by name of Peter Jackson.

Also this time there also lived a man in Baltimore by the name of Starlight.

Peter was a boxer, he had made money and reputation, and was trying his best to win a championship. He was the real noise in the heavyweight class, but he was a Colorado coon, and the white men drew the line on him. He had beaten bushes of them and was down to grass. His manager suggested a tour of the country and offered $100 to any man that would stay four rounds with the great Peter.

They went out on the road some weeks, when finally they landed in Baltimore. That day they pasted the town full of bills which read:

"One hundred dollars will be paid to any boxer who will stand before Peter Jackson in a scientific boxing exhibition of four rounds."

Had Friends to Burn.

Ha! Ha! This man Starlight, mentioned before, lived in Baltimo', and he had friends to burn. Starlight was as big as a house and used to play bean bag with the freight trains in the railroad yards. He was as strong as Barney Ives and could lick any squad of cops that ever lived. He had a jaw like Ossus and was harder than iron. He was the man for that money, and his friends backed him like mad.

Starlight opened the gap in his face, tore off a few cuss words and then burst forth in merry laughter.

"Why, I could take cookie's con to me," said Starlight. "Ah'll make a bigger fuss wid dat nan dan he say wid twice dat desperate wiggle and went at Peter again. Peter, leave it in me. Ah'sa cherry ripe, yes' at presen' an' there'll be doin's, sah."

Starlight put the hen fruit in the sandal and beef it home, got out the sporting almanacs and got the inside on Peter, and was then more than ever.

Peter showed the next night, and Starlight was right with the goods.

The announcer said that there would be a scientific exhibition of four rounds, and that if Mr. Starlight was there at the finish he would be given the roll.

The boys squeezed mitts, the gong clanged and off they went like a bunch of red heads.

Bang! A left stung Mr. Starlight on the nark, his head went back and as he was springing it forward again, he met another left hand, and found himself in the same place. Bing, bing, bing, bing, like a gatling the thesis left on Mr. Starlight's nose again. He crouched, changed his pose, but still that bass got there on the beak. It was very discouraging to this man with the heavenly name, and he began to look worried.

Made the Sports Laugh.

The sports laughed at him and the gallery roared.

Bing, bing, bing, again they landed, and Starlight's face began to look as though a painter was trying to get a Swiss sunset effect. Starlight shook his head with a desperate wiggle and went at Peter again. Bing, bing, bing! Peter was still there on the nose only, no other spot was touched and that poor beak began to swell in and get sore.

Bang! landed another, and Mr. Starlight almost went over the ropes.

He couldn't stand it any longer. When his head clearing he dropped his hands, walked over to the referee, and, placing his head on one side said: "Mr. Referee, Ah believe that THIS was supposed to be a scientific exhibishun."

The referee smiled, and in a very also way told the gentleman that as far as he knew it was.

"Well, then," said Mr. Starlight, "see, ask Mr. Jackson to scatter his bits a little."

He said: "They make bags for that kind of fighting."

I said: "Beaks were made to look at, not to squash."

The world said: "Don't let any one make a free lunch of your features."

SMATHERS FILES HIS APPEAL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—E. E. Smathers, the millionaire turfman, stole a march today on C. K. G. Billings, equally prominent among horse owners, when he filed with the National Trotting Association, in annual session in the Hoffman House here, an application to have the association investigate thoroughly the charges that he connived at the "doping" of Lou Dillon when the great trotting mare lost her race and a $5,000 championship cup with Smathers's trotter, Major Delmar, at Memphis.

It was expected that both Smathers and Billings would ask that the charges and counter charges should be probed by the trotting association, but the application first filed is the one to receive first consideration.

Smathers Scores First.

Smathers's side of the dispute, which was brought into the spotlight of New York by Secretary Howe of the Memphis Trotting Association getting a writ of replevin and having the sheriff seize the gold cup, will therefore be taken up first by the National Association's Board of Review, which meets in May.

P. P. Johnston of Lexington, Ky., president of the National Trotting Association, to-day censured Secretary Howe of Memphis, who is alleged to be acting for C. K. G. Billings, because Howe took the dispute into the courts instead of submitting it to the National Association.

"This suit brought by Howe is the wrong procedure," said President Johnston, "because it is a civil action, and the National Association has full jurisdiction in the matter. It should never have got into the courts.

"One of the by-laws of the National Association says that those who enter horses in a race must agree beforehand that all disputes shall be submitted to the association, and that its decision in the matter shall be final.

Courts Are Powerless.

"The National Association, moreover, is the only power that is able to declare a man outlawed as the result of any of its decisions. The courts have no such power whatever in the matter."

An interesting feature of the matter now before the National Association is the fact that C. K. G. Billings is a member of its board of control and as such is entitled to sit with the board of review and take a share in its proceedings. The association is aware of the fact that the presence and if Billings is re-elected he will have the right to sit with the board when the matter comes before the board of control.

It is expected, however, that in the event of his being re-elected he will ask that Billings be excused in his place.

The gold cup in dispute once more in Smathers's possession, having been returned to him by Sheriff Hayes upon the deposit of a $7,000 bond.

PAIGE WHIPS KING.

Tiffany did not break no rules for Dr. King in his match with William Paige in the Class A amateur tourney at the Hub Billiard Parlors, as in previous matches, and as a result he lost his first match of the tournament by the score of 500 to 271.

FORD'S $500 AUTO TO BE SEEN HERE

"I believe that I have solved the problem of cheap as well as simple automobile construction. Advancement in auto building has passed the experimental stage, and the general public is interested only in the knowledge that a serviceable machine can be constructed for a price within reach of many. I am convinced that the $500 auto is destined to revolutionize automobile construction, and I consider my new model the crowning achievement of my life."

This was the statement made by Henry Ford of the Ford Motor Company. Mr. Ford has completed two cars, selling price $500, which he says are the last word in automobile world. These cars were shown in New York at the recent automobile show and are now going the round of the automobile shows in the West, and will be one of the attractions at the coming Boston show, March 10th to 17th.

It has been the contention of many that a $500 car would never be placed on the market, and no serviceable machine available to stand the wear and tear of travel. Mr. Ford believes he has solved the problem.

Twenty thousand of these cars will be built this year, and already orders for half this number have been booked by the Ford Company. What is more, the firm will guarantee every machine.

The new creation will be known as the "Model N." It will be fitted with a three four-cylinder vertical motor, 3½-inch bore by 3¾-inch stroke. The weight will be 700 pounds, with 84-inch wheel base. Will have pressed steel frame and an improved planetary transmission.

Improvements have been held out to the firm not to construct such a car. If a success, it means to Ford's mind a new manufacturing business into chaos. The trade people view the newcomer with interest.

The fact that Mr. Ford regards the machine as the achievement of his long endeavor as an inventor and auto construction, and will base his reputation on its suitability, is taken as a sure sign that "Model N" will create a sensation.

"It took me two years of experimenting to solve the problem," said Mr. Ford, "and I will stake my reputation that it will fill the bill."

WALSH-ATTELL BOUT SLATED FOR HOLIDAY

One of the biggest cards in the boxing line was clinched yesterday when Eddie Kevlin, acting for Jimmy Walsh, and Chelsea, on February 22. The managers deposited the forfeits of $250 each in the hands of the BOSTON AMERICAN, for weight and appearance, which binds them to the event.

This match was arranged by Kevlin and Hub club will be appreciated by the local fans.

This bout will settle the featherweight championship of the world, as Attell holds the title now, and Walsh has go out of his way to make any effort to get the bout. Both boys agree to weigh in at the ring, side to fight 105 pounds, with privilege of 3 pounds. Walsh especially demanded close weights as he can comfortably box at 108 pounds.

Mike Murray has been selected to do the weighing-in, and all details are completed. Attell will leave for this city on the morning of the contest. If either boy is overweight he forfeits the purse.

Straight Queensberry rules will prevail, with the provision that they break at the order of the referee.

Both boys agreed on Eugene Buckley as referee, or acting as judge with Mike Murray and Jack Meehan officiating in the ring.

It will be busy times for the crack little boxers from now on to the date of their meeting, and they will be in the finest condition for the important contest.

LYNN HORSEMEN WANT SPEEDWAY

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

LYNN, Feb. 14.—That the Gentlemen's Driving Club of this city is the real thing was plainly manifested last evening to the conclusive satisfaction of all who had the privilege to mingle with them at their third annual banquet. Nothing was left undone to make it a gala night for the members of the organization and their invited guests.

Nearly 300 sat down to the feast. There were members of the city government and guests from the driving clubs of the neighboring cities. The hall had been beautifully decorated for the occasion, and plainly apparent that it was a "horsey" gathering.

La Croix Opened the Way.

President William La Croix of the club opened the way for the after-dinner speeches. Both he and Mayor Meehan made mention of the fact that the organization comprised 700 members and that Lynn who paid taxes on more than two millions of property. In closing he introduced Mayor Charles Neal Barney, and at the same time presented to him a petition bearing seven feet long containing the signatures of the city's best residents who favored the building of a speedway.

The Mayor then went carefully over the city's resources, showing that the growth was so very rapid that it was hard to get enough money in the treasury to pay the increasing debts. He favored the improving of the streets and sidewalks, but was particularly careful to avoid the speedway question and placing himself on record as being in favor of carrying the project.

He was followed by Judge Barrett, who kept the company in a roar of laughter for a half hour. His fund of stories was new, pithy, and marked him as an artist in after-dinner speaking. Mingled with the jokes were a few of truths that made a hit.

President W. W. French of the Gloucester Driving Club told of his horse interesting yarn, and that the equine would not be entered till the city had a speedway. Everybody loved Billy Hutchins, the well-known telephone man a fact and science had reached the stage where it would be possible to produce life by combination used in the laboratory.

George D'Arcy of the Dorchester club impressed on the members of the Lynn club the need of a speedway, and the irresistible logic required to get the city Fathers into line. He related the stremuous work that the club had to do to secure the speedway in the Franklin Field.

Speedway Fight in 1903.

Ex-Mayor Eustace of Lynn outlined the fight the club had put up for a speedway since 1903. Last year a committee went to the finance committee and asked for $5,000 to complete the track on Meadow Park. It happened that the year's budget had already been made up and it was impossible to raise the funds in that way. But the Lynn Driving Club succeeded in securing the sum of $1,500 for a speedway and would be up against the finance Lynn would have a drive which could not be beaten in New England. He was in hopes that the Park Commissioners would press ahead and see that just the Lynn club could have the pleasure of inviting the Gentlemen's Driving Club to the coming summer and give them a drubbing.

Randolph, a member of the Dorchester club, with a few remarks in response to a stinging rebuke for having so many Lynn delegates. He declared that matinee and speedway racing was the sport for gentlemen, and that in Lynn horses which required two sets of harness in order to defeat other members was not sportsmanlike.

Fred Brand of the same club said the salvation of the light harness horse lay in the matinee and speedway racing of the driving clubs springing up all over the country.

Anson has based property in Chicago for a ball park. He will manage a team in the Chicago City league next season, to be known as the White Sox.

The Philadelphia Nationals are anxious to get big Andrew Peterson, the local southpaw, who has been sold to Toronto in the New York Americans. Part of the Phillies want him on the safe mon he can retire.

Jack Sutthoff, the popular Cincinnati pitcher, who was with Philadelphia last season, has been purchased by Toledo club. He joined Tebby with Freddie Grillo club.

One of the Cubs, whose name could not be learned, has written to James A. Hart, president of the club, asking for advance money. "That player will be disappointed if he doesn't get it," he says, "as season he doesn't, what is the use of living?" said the ex-magnate.

President Hedges of the Browns is in receipt of a letter from Rockenfield, his running mate in Cincinnati, declaring his contract calls for an annual increase in salary is granted him. Rockenfield failed to report to the Cincinnati club last season, and it is highly probable that his demand will meet a cold reception.

Toronto gave Outfielder Moran and Infielder Becker to secure Herman Long, the veteran shortstop, once with the Boston Nationals.

Pat Donovan has left Worcester—Dooley and Cassady too lawyers—Lewis and Pattee—on his infield. He himself is a graduate of Yale school, the profession, Jacks of all trades and things. What?

Umpire Henry Orbe of the National League says the playing rules should be rewritten. One of the points he puts up reason. The veteran official says most of the rules can be interpreted several different ways.

Another University of Illinois infielder will try to break into fast company next season. He is Cook of Purdue, who has been secured by the St. Louis Americans. Earl Jackstone of the Chicago Nationals, Ed Konetchy of the St. Louis Nationals and Pitcher Foster of the Boston Nationals have come from Illinois, and are working in the big league now.

TEAM RACES FEATURE CARD

TECH VS. TUFTS.

Final arrangements for a dual track meet between Tech and Tufts have been concluded by the managers of the two teams, and the event will take place in the gymnasium of the former Feb. 20. Although the Tufts team would have preferred a later date, such arrangements were impossible, due to the fact that the Boston College Athletes do not continue in training three the coming months.

Husbands Are Only Men; Don't Expect Them to Be Angels

By Beatrice Fairfax

YOUNG wives run the risk of making themselves very unhappy by demanding too much attention from their husbands.

They would like to prolong the honeymoon indefinitely, forgetting altogether that the practical side of life must be attended to as well as the ideal.

A man can't be always making love and make a good living at the same time.

Don't listen to the conclusion that your husband has ceased to love you simply because he does not tell you of his love twenty times a day.

Of course he loves you just as much, probably better, than ever, but he has your living well and your home to make now, and has not as much time for lovemaking as he used to have.

In the old days he talked for love's sake; now he works for it.

There will be times when he will be worried and preoccupied.

Those are the times for you to be sympathetic and silent.

You can't offer him much in the way of advice, but your sympathy will mean a great deal to him.

Don't try to coax him away from all his bachelor friends. A man needs men's companionship or he will grow narrow.

Try and interest yourself in his favorite pursuit. If he loves baseball go to the game with him, even though it bore you to death.

Don't meet him at night with a list of woes as long as your arm.

Tell him the pleasant happenings of the day—not the unpleasant ones.

You and your husband are partners in the Happy Home business.

His share is to provide for home, and yours is to keep it.

If you would be a good housekeeper you must understand every part of the household work thoroughly.

You may be able to afford a servant, but in order to teach her you must know how to do things yourself.

You should know how to sweep and dust, how to cook and how to sew.

Unless you know how to do all these things well, you are not living up to your part of the bargain.

But don't get so absorbed by your household duties that you have no time left for your husband.

There is a happy medium where you can be clum as well as wife.

Be as economical as you can; remember that your husband works hard for the money; don't spend it foolishly.

And, above all, when little quarrels occur, as they will even in the best regulated families, don't be ashamed to say you are sorry.

Many a big heartache has its origin in a foolish little quarrel where neither side will acknowledge being to blame.

It may be hard to say you are sorry, but you will be sure to find that it is over that you have pocketed your pride.

Remember that your husband is not a demi-god, but just an everyday man, who loves you and whom you love.

Don't expect too much from him; be just and generous to him, as you expect him to be to you, and the chances are you will be a happy wife.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

BETTER WAIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years old and am keeping company with a young man of twenty. I love him deeply and am sure that it is reciprocated.

He only earns eight dollars per week and has no steady trade, so for that reason my parents (who are well to do) oppose this match. The young man is ignorant of the opposition. Now, what I want to know is what I should do. It is impossible for me to give him up, for I love him too deeply, and I am willing to wait a few years. My parents won't listen to this. They want me to give him right up, and as I cannot do it, there is trouble in the house. I am almost heartbroken.

A. T.

MY dear, you cannot blame your parents for opposing your marriage to a man who cannot afford to support you. You are both young and can afford to wait. Tell your parents that you cannot give him up entirely, but that you will wait until they feel that he can properly support you. If they see that you are in earnest they will probably be reasonable and give their consent to your waiting.

A DIFFICULT POSITION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-eight years old, have been keeping company for two years with a young lady of twenty-one, and became engaged to her a few weeks ago.

Her mother, who does not care very much for me, has recently insulted me in such a manner that it would be impossible for a gentleman to take the first step toward a reconciliation. Now, is it proper for me to call at the young lady's home, although I could not avoid meeting the mother, too, or should I content myself with seeing the girl occasionally at other places?

"MANY THANKS."

YOU certainly are in a difficult position. If you really love the girl, it seems to me there is but one thing to do, and that is to go to the mother, have the whole thing out, and see if you cannot come to some understanding. It will not be an easy thing to do, of course, but there will be very little pleasure in being obliged to depend always on seeing your sweetheart at other places. Swallow your pride and try and become friends with the mother.

A. T.

A GREAT MISTAKE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl and have been keeping company with a young man about a year. A short time ago I accidentally met him and his fiancée, a girl. He did not see me, so I followed him, and after he left her I went up to him and gave him a calling down. Miss Fairfax, this young man meets many places where I am in the habit of going. Do you think I ought to keep away or still keep on going? Also, do you think I am right or wrong in following him?

ANXIOUS.

I AM afraid you made a great mistake in sending him for such a trip. He may have met her most accidentally and simply been walking with her as far as their paths lay together. He will think you have a very bad temper. Do not keep away from places where you may see him, but speak to him politely if you happen to meet.

Sly Cupid and St. Valentine Hold Complete Sway To-day

Final Winners in Valentine Verse Contest

CUPID and St. Valentine hold full sway today. And the little God of Love need not lack for keen-pointed darts with which to pierce the hearts of maid and youth.

Whole quivers full have been supplied by poetic-minded readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN during the past weeks.

The contest is now closed. And it has proved one of the most interesting of the many which have had place on this page.

After all, there's nothing like giving such a little airing once in a while. This keeps it from getting moth-eaten and musty from too long a residence on the proverbial shelf.

It pays to take it down at least once a year and banish away the cobwebs. And many thousands of readers of this page have been homesteading their inmost hearts. They've all sticked up to enjoy this day dedicated to the patron saint of love.

Here is the final instalment of verses received prior to the day:

BRIEF, BUT EARNEST

DARLING, I will never forsake you
If you'll be my valentine;
Queen of my heart and home I'll make you,
If you'll promise to be mine.
Love is all I have to send you,
On this, Cupid's holiday.
All my loving thoughts attend you:
Answer, sweetheart—name the day.
KATHERINE KILCUP.
No. 93 Normandy street, Roxbury.

UNDYING LOVE

MY love for thee no change would know,
Tho' years on years should come and go,
To thee alone I'd honor pay,
Life's last, final, parting day.
MISS A. M. HINCKLEY.
No. 79 Charles street, Auburndale.

BITTER, SWEET

LIFE is sweet,
But, oh! how bitter:
To confess my love for you
And then not sign me
REMA PRINCE.
Hebron Station, Me.

A PARTNERSHIP

SWEETHEART, I cannot live
Apart from thee;
Say, sweetheart, will thou give
Thy heart to me?
Oh tell me, thou who share
The love within mine,
That I for thee may call,
Thy Valentine.
LEAVITT CLEGH SHERBURNE,
Tufts College, Mass.

ENVIOUS

WHEN she wanders thro' the meadows
Gathering sunny and so sweet,
That the fresh and fragant flowers
In envy like her greet.
While I, who dare not kiss her hand,
Bless all the wild flowers.
ELEANOR KELSEE.

MOTHER'S DARLING

BRIGHTLY as the stars may shine,
They can't excel my Valentine.
With golden hair and sweet brown eyes,
Her love, I'm sure, I highly prize.

She loves me dearly, that I know,
Because she's often told me so;
I'll tell you now, this precious pearl
Is my own seven-year-old girl.
MRS. H. S. FERGUSON.
Box No. 510, Whitinsville.

AN ACHING VOID

OH, tell me not the bliss of love
Is mortal, not divine;
Let me wake to find in truth
That I'm your valentine.
The future has no hops in store,
'Tis but a void I see;
Elysium hath no charm for me,
Unless 'twere shared by thee.
E. ROY.
Windsor Hotel, Bangor, Me.

MERCENARY

SOME love for an hour, some for a day,
Some for a time, then ride away.
My love for you will last for years,
Sharing your gladness and your tears.
It will prove no fancy, that you'll find,
Should you become my valentine.
JAMES O'CONNELL.

UNTIL ETERNITY

I LOVE you and I think you know
How dear you are to me.
My heart is your's, wherever you go,
Until eternity.
MARGARET O'CONNELL.

"THINE"

OH, lady, dear! oh, lady mine!
Through the shimmering waves of life
There shines a light so pure, divine,
It soothes my nerves, stills all strife,
And bears me on my way.
It shines on my heart so very shrine
And holds me in its mighty sway—
Thy love—my valentine.
"I. M. THINE."
Medford.

CUPID'S MODEL

IN the gold of your hair Dan Cupid
Has gilded his arrow tips,
And fashioned his bow of silver
Like the curve of your perfect lips.
Then through your true and faithful heart
His speeded his arrow to miss,
So how I plead, dear lady, have talk, heed
And be my valentine.
MISS J. E. WRIGHT.
Cochituate.

SIMPLE GIFT

A SIMPLE gift, I send thee, dear,
Though small indeed the offering be,
Yet it will serve to bring to mind,
I fondly trust, one thought of me;
I may not, in so small a space,
Say all mine heart would gladly tell,
Yet oh, I pray, believe this truth,
The sender loves thee, dear one, well.
SELMA MOBERG.
No. 127 Hancock street, Everett.

Help Wanted!

OF all the days that make the year
No one so full of bliss is
As that which comes in second month,
That month of love and kisses,
For the faint-hearted swain may hope—
Too bashful, he, to ask her—
Saint Valentine may ope her heart,
And let him in to woo her.
CHARLES F. PIDGIN,
No. 20 Mt. Vernon st., Boston.

Some Soothing Sayings

A BACHELOR says there is nothing dearer to a man than a good wife—or at least, more expensive.

Love may make the world go round, but it isn't always able to make the girl's father come round.

Nothing pleases the average person more than to be caught in the act of doing a good deed on the sly.

It's comparatively easy to turn over a new leaf, but it is often difficult to make it stay turned.

Avoid abbreviation in your correspondence, otherwise you will get into the habit of breaking your word.

If a man wishes to convince his wife that he is a genius, he must do it during the courtship.

"Single blessedness" is a bouquet a bachelor throws at himself when he wants to marry and cannot.

A man loves a woman because she is a woman. A woman loves a man for want of something better to love.

Love is a sea of trouble upon which everyone wants to launch his boat, even though he knows it will swamp.

Few women love a man enough to pretend to somebody that she is not so sure about it as she would like to be.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Settling Old Scores

Copyright, 1905, by American Journal-Examiner.

AGAIN Jack tried the searchlight, but this time the shrill voice in the tower rang out in a tone of command and in apparent command to pay no heed to the light was obeyed by the multitude.

Nearer and nearer they surged, and the murmur and babel of many voices made the most terrifying din Jack had ever heard.

And then deliverance came to hand from an unexpected source.

For there was a long trail of fire, falling, falling like a spent rocket nearer and nearer to the earth.

A cheer of the crowd roused.

With faces upturned and with little gasps and cries of wonder and fear they awaited the messenger that was speeding to them from on high, never sensing to think of fleeing for safety.

"A message from Admiral Jarvis," in a whisper to Rivers, "do you know what that is?"

"A meteor, I suppose," said Rivers, who was watching the fiery apparition with a white face.

"Nothing else," said Jack. "The airship was blown up and is coming down on their heads."

Hardly had he spoken when with a whirr like the rushing of many wings the fiery thing, a great comet, plunged through the treetops, and with a crash of splintering wood and tumbling ruins fell into the thickest of the crowd.

A shower of frightful sparks, followed by shrieks and moans, came from the crowd as the fiery blocks of wood pinioned beneath the mass, crushed to death, many of the people who had come to see.

For one second of suspense the crowd that had escaped stood gazing at the wreckage.

The machine was still burning, and the blue tongues of flame from the power gas used in the machine shed a ghastly light on the scene that threw the shadows of the dead and frightfully shapen on the mass of tree trunks and the side of the house.

Then, as if moved by one impulse, the crowd broke and fled.

The women and children were crushed and trampled under the heels of the men.

The wounded beneath the machine were left to their fate, and in the fury of their selfish flames, the old men were knocked down or tossed aside as the strongest made their escape, and after the main body of the crowd had fled, the surviving men and children and aged made up a pathetic little throng, and with many a wail lifted them by their terror.

"Is anything else to come?" asked Jack, and beckoning Rivers to follow him, he ran through the steps of the temple and toward the burning airship.

Understanding the mechanism of the machine perfectly, he had no difficulty in finding the leaky gas valve and shutting it off.

It had been the gas alone that burned, the structural part of the machine being fireproof, and as soon as this was shut off the fire went out.

Plunging head first into the mass of struggling humanity, Jack and Rivers labored for two hours clearing away the wreckage, and helping the living to free themselves.

Many of the natives were so terribly burned that they died in a few minutes, many could not long survive, and scores of forms lay cold and still, past all human help.

But the young men were able to free dozens of victims, and for their efforts they received kicks and punches from the frenzied natives, who however, as soon as they saw that it was the white men they had assailed, cried aloud in fear and ran shrieking into the woods.

With a wife, and face, Jack searched long and earnestly for Hualana.

And he survived in terrible fail? Had it been possible for a man, even with Hua-

A Romance of Beacon Street and the Slums of Boston

Sidney Warwick's Great Story of Present Day Life

CHAPTER XXVII.

Copyright, 1905, by American Journal-Examiner.

AS she stood there, pausing before she could summon up courage to lift the knocker, she hardly herself came with a large shopping basket. Olive entered, whilst the woman went down the road on her shopping errand.

The dusk of early evening was beginning to close in and the twilight had entered in their sitting room, where as yet no lamp had been lighted, as Olive passed in.

"Mother, dear," she said softly.

She could see the familiar figure seated in the rocking chair at one side of the room, the frail, patient, gentle-faced mother, for whom she had worked so long. How was she to break it?

There was no answer. The figure in the gray dust did not move or turn her head. Olive saw that in her hand, slightly outstretched, was a letter.

"Mother!"

There was a sudden swift vague fear in Olive's mind, as she crossed the room quickly, and bent down to kiss her mother.

Then a great cry broke from the girl, forcing a wild cry from her. Why did not her mother respond? Why was she so still? Had she fainted?

"Mother!" she cried again wildly. "It is I, Olive. Speak to me—speak to me!"

She rushed over to the chimney piece and seized the box of matches that lay there, and in the intense dread of the unknown that filled her, struck one after another in trembling haste. She was in a frightful condition.

If the mother's eyes were open, too, they stared at her without any response to her cry in them.

An open letter was grasped tight in the right hand, but Olive had no eyes except for her mother then. She had fainted, she at her heart; horror blinded her; she could hardly see clearly; only she had never seen her mother's face with such a look before.

Was it a swoon? Olive would not, could not, believe that she was dead.

With her arms around her mother, trying desperately to persuade herself that she could feel the throbbing of the heart, Olive cried out wildly for the landlady, forgetting that she had left her to the woman going out, and that no one else was in the house.

Where was the nearest doctor? She rushed madly out, nothing as she ran through the front door. She must find a doctor. Her mother was ill, perhaps dying.

Olive refused even yet to believe that she could be dead.

If only she could bring a doctor in time! It was Olive's only thought as she ran blindly down the road, round the turning to the next door that bore a medical man's brass plate.

The name on the plate was Hugh Jardine.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Alone

IN her half-distracted state, bordering on frenzy, Olive rang a frantic peal at the bell over the brass plate bearing the name of Hugh Jardine.

As the door was opened by a maid servant in response to her wild summons the girl, who had been coming down the street from the opposite direction, rushed up to the door and passed into the house, ingoring the look of astonishment into Olive's face, as the latter cried wildly to her:

"A doctor (here) Is he at home? I want to see him at once! I want him to come to my mother, who is dying (or dead) at once!"

Before the man could answer, the girl who had just passed Audrey Lee, second, crossed the hall and quickly opened a door.

"Hugh!" she cried, "will you come at once? There is a poor girl here in great distress." And almost immediately Jardine came out into the hall.

As she saw Jim Olive cried:

"Are you a doctor? Oh, will you come at once? My mother is dying—dying alone—perhaps dead! Oh, I must find a doctor for me may be; very likely I can't say it—but I must find a doctor! You are a doctor! You will come at once, won't you?"

With a most appealing gesture toward him, taking a few swaying steps into the hall, she sank down, almost fainting, upon a chair; she would have fallen but for Audrey Lee, who hastily forward and supported her to a chair.

"I will come at once," said Jardine. "Where do you live?"

Olive sat in the chair, trembling convulsively. She seemed not to have heard the words. She broke out hysterically:

"She's dying alone—my poor mother!"

A Pitiful Plea

"Dying or dead! Perhaps they will say I killed her, as they said I killed Miss Aylmer! Oh, go at once to her—in pity's sake go at once!"

At that wild outburst, Hugh Jardine started and looked at her more closely, as he took his hat.

"You need not come, my poor girl! Stay here," he said gently. "I will see the name and address where you want me to go."

"Graham, Olive Graham—no, not Graham—Calthorpe! I don't know what I'm saying. The name is Calthorpe," she cried. "No, I won't stay here; I'll go with you—I'll find strength somehow. I should go mad if I waited in suspense here. She runs uncertainly to her feet.

"Won't you stay here a little while?" said Audrey, looking pitifully at the other's face of hopeless misery. "Can I help you at all?"

"Can anyone help me now?" cried Olive, struggling to control herself. "Yes, yes, I am strong enough now. The weakness is past. I must go to my mother. Come!"

"Then take my arm," said Jardine. And Olive was glad enough to avail herself of its support.

In spite of her assertion, she was still trembling violently and could hardly have reached the house unaided. Only the excercise of all her strength of will prevented her from collapsing entirely. Would she reach the rooms to find her mother dead?

Together they walked back to the lodgings.

Jardine asked no further questions; he realized that his companion was in no condition to be questioned, and understood that she was the girl who a few weeks ago had been the central figure of that trial for murder. Those other words confirmed the belief that had escaped her in her hysterical outburst.

"Perhaps they will say I killed her, as they said I killed Miss Aylmer!"

The door of the house was still open as Olive had left it. Jardine followed her through the narrow passage into the room where the solitary candle was burning.

There on the couch, still in the same sitting position, was the figure with the white face, holding the letter in the rigid outstretched hand.

This time the truth could not be denied. She realized it even before the surgeon had bent down over the figure in the chair and then said gently:

"Olive Calthorpe—it would only be cruel to deceive you. Your mother is dead."

He expected another wild, hysterical outburst; but the girl heard his words without uttering a sound. She stood there as though turned to stone by the overwhelming shock. It was as though the last link that bound her to the old life before all this tragedy and pain had come into it was snapped; she was utterly alone now, utterly desperate.

She hardly heard what Jardine was saying.

"I think undoubtedly your mother's death has been caused by apoplexy. She may have had some sudden shock in this letter she was evidently reading at the time of her death. Do you know what was in it?"

Olive shook her head dully.

"No, I have been out all the day—I came in to find her as you found her."

Jardine took the letter from the dead woman's hand and gave it to the girl. Almost mechanically Olive glanced at it.

"Madame, as the trustee appointed to wind up the affairs of Alexander MacNeil, formerly of this town, who has lately absconded, and as to whose defalcations you will no doubt have seen more in the papers, I am sorry to inform you that the principal placed by you in the hands and at the discretion of the said Alexander MacNeil for investment, from which your interest has been derived, has, we find, been diverted to improper uses and we fear that nothing remains."

At first Olive read the letter scarcely grasping its meaning, her mind too clouded by the numbing shock of her mother's death. Then slowly an understanding of its significance forced its way into her brain.

The poor pittance that had stood between them and absolute poverty was swept away—principal and interest—at a blow, and the shock of it had killed her mother. The man in whose integrity her mother had trusted, the solicitor in whose she had given her small capital for investment, was a thief. Were there any regrets in a world?

HOW TO HOLD YOUR BODY WHEN STANDING, SITTING OR SLEEPING

By Arletta Burroughs

IT has been said that to cultivate a child successfully it is necessary to begin with its great-grandparents. This refers to the cultivation of the child's mind, but it is a truth also more evident in a physical sense.

It is the duty of every parent to leave the heritage of good health and perfect physical development to his offspring. To do this unsparing pains must be taken from the hour of the child's birth until maturity. It must be trained to recognize the valuable aid of correct habits.

Of these the cultivation of the habit of erect carriage is one not only deserved that physical organization of its highest possibilities, but have actually given it a push toward its destruction.

Proper exercise must be a habit to be of any actual good. It cannot be taken spasmodically. In three days of exercise few find the time for outside exercise long enough to keep the body in good condition, but much can be done indoors and without any kind of apparatus.

Stand straight, sit straight, sleep straight. How often do we use this pleasant way of health rhetoric! It is, in fact, a homely maxim in the speech of man in the country.

Most people, in sitting, either stoop forward until the lungs are cramped and useless for perfect breathing, or, if sitting on the end of the chair throw their weight on the end of the spine. This is the cause of more of the nervous troubles than would at first seem possible.

To learn to stand correctly, stand against a door or wall that has no baseboard. Stand "tall," stretching the body until every part of the back of the body and limbs touches the wall.

When you have accomplished this swing forward on the ankles as hinges (bending at no other joint) until you can rise and fall on your toes, settling into the same tracks without swaying backward or forward. Then lift the head until you are perfectly easy to look directly in the face.

If you have kept your shoulders well down in the stretching process you will find that the chest is leading, that the abdomen has taken second position, and that you will not look like a contortionist ready to tackle any problem that comes along.

If your standing position is correct you will be provided with the base at the side of your head and held perpendicular by a line with your knee, hip, shoulder and ear.

In sitting, place yourself as far back in the chair as possible, then using the lower spine as a hinge throw the body forward at the required angle. The same relative position of hip, shoulder and ear should obtain as when standing.

In sleeping, have your bed as level as possible, and sleep with little or no pillow. Do not lie yourself into a knot, but lie straight, which gives the blood a chance to circulate throughout all the extremities. Get yourself in the habit of following these rules, and soon you will notice a freedom and exhilaration which comes only with good health.

NEWSIES IN FULL DRESS DANCE MERRILY

Hustling Paper Sellers Take "Best Girls" to Annual Ball.

The Boston "newsie" took out his evening clothes and his best girl for the newsboys' annual ball, and who a credit to the girl and the garb.

"Evening clothes?"

Look here. Do you know Phil Rohrish? He is selling papers today at his regular stand at the Scollay square entrance to the East Boston tunnel. You may have bought a paper from him day after day.

He's just your newsboy, like hundreds of others about the city streets.

When the grand march for this ball opened in Paul Revere Hall, Rohrish was at the side of the leading couple. He wore evening clothes, boutonniere, gloves, and so on. And, without an error, he guided a long line of newsboy marchers and their partners through the complicated figures. It was a stiff proposition for any young lad, but the Scollay square "newsie" did it without turning a hair.

Then there was Dan Mulkern, on the dance order he was Floor Director Daniel V. Mulkern, president of Boston's Newsboys' Protective Union No. 9077, American Federation of Labor.

But Dan workshops he's Dan Mulkern and he sells papers at the foot of Summer street, just where Dewey square opens. And he wears clothes that will stand the work.

At the Head of the Line.

But at the head of the march Dan Mulkern was as dignified and presentable as could be in his dancing attire. He had Miss Annie Titus for his partner to lead the march with him, and he and Miss Titus chatted away as gaily and led the march as airily as though all newspapers had printed for the last time.

Then came the Mayor and his partner. It is understood that Mayor Fitzgerald is finding his job so much "bigger, better and busier" that he declines all social invitations. But he didn't get by the newsboys. When he entered the building at 9 o'clock there was a claw-hammered escort waiting for him. He was led up to the dance hall and was immediately presented to Miss Nellie Galvin. The Mayor was "charmed" and Miss Galvin was "delighted" and the next minute the Mayor had given Miss Galvin his arm and they were in second place on the march line.

Meanwhile there was much cheering for the Mayor, but to let him know they were tickled to see him. And the Mayor smiled gallantly on Miss Galvin and discovered small talk. And Miss Galvin smiled back at the Mayor and the "newsies" grinned impartially at both.

The Grand March.

Then Assistant Chief Marshal Abraham Shankman—he sells papers at the Atlantic avenue corner of Dewey square, opposite Mulkern's stand, gave his arm to Miss Celia Levine and they took the third place. And about three score of other dignified "newsies" escorted their girl partners into line and the march was on.

They marched around by twos and were commanded by fours, and then by eights side, and then in reverse order, and then eight abreast and forward four eights and a letter S, and never once became tangled up or delayed.

The complete list of dance committees and music follows:

THE TREASON OF THE SENATE

It Is the Meanest Treason—the Sale of a Man's Country for Money

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS

Writer of "The Treason of the Senate," published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine for March.

The character of the United States Senate, and the abuse of power by the Senate must more and more occupy the minds of the American people.

Mr. David Graham Phillips, whose picture we publish in this column, has rendered a service to his fellow citizens in undertaking, for the Cosmopolitan Magazine, a serious, thorough analysis of what he calls THE SENATE'S TREASON.

Mr. Phillips most aptly quotes as his text the Constitution, which defines as treason against the United States "ADHERING TO THEIR ENEMIES, GIVING THEM AID AND COMFORT."

We have no doubt that many thousands of our readers will take the pains to read, in the March number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, Mr. Phillips's first article, and his later articles in succeeding months.

The text from which he preaches is true and CONVINCING.

The Senators of the United States are traitors to their country, because they do give "aid and comfort" to the country's enemies.

The Senate of the United States, which deliberately and shamelessly holds up in committee a bill to protect the food of the people from adulteration, IS A TREASONABLE SENATE.

The Senate of the United States has done this shameful thing. No man has taken the responsibility upon himself—they are too cunning in their treason for that.

Bills which the people demand, if they affect the nation sentimentally, as does the PURE FOOD BILL, are simply choked to death in committee rooms away from the public eye.

Other bills of even GREATER national importance, but free from sentiment—those aimed at plutocratic control of government—are openly killed, openly and boldly derided and butchered by the Senate pirates in full view of the inhabitants of the United States.

The Senate of the United States is notoriously and shamelessly owned and directed by the trusts, that bribe all agencies of popular government that can be bought, and intimidate or ignore others.

The most dangerous enemies of the people, AND, THEREFORE, OF THE UNITED STATES, are those Trusts swiftly replacing government by the people with a government by organized money. The Senate in its membership is overwhelmingly controlled by trust influences. Trust puppets sit as Senators representing such States as New York. The Senate obeys the orders of the country's enemies—the Trusts—and that is TREASON.

Our Senate, with its shortcomings, its permanent menace to popular government, has been compared with the British House of Lords. But the comparison does not hold. The House of Lords is a collection of individuals—not a few of them conscientious and honest—elected by accident of birth, and opposed to popular government by heredity and class. But the House of Lords is timid when the voice of the people is HEARD DISTINCTLY. The House of Lords realizes that any popular movement could sweep it to destruction. Very feeble is the protest of the peers of Great Britain against the expressed wish of the House of Commons.

Our irresponsible Senate is a bolder body—a reckless body of bandits of high finance. It menaces republican government much more seriously than the House of Lords menaces the constitutional government of Great Britain.

The people of the United States must keep their minds on this Senate. It stands between them and their will. It has at its mercy the President of the United States, who, under the Constitution, can only sign laws after the Senate has passed them; can only appoint to office BY AND WITH THE SENATE'S ADVICE AND CONSENT.

POPULAR ELECTION OF THE SENATORS OF THE UNITED STATES IS THE GREAT DEMAND OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE TO-DAY.

If there is any man who doubts the need for this change in our government system, he will no longer doubt when he shall have read the analysis of senatorial treason by David Graham Phillips, of which the first installment appears in the Cosmopolitan Magazine for March.

It is to be hoped that other magazines and other periodicals will take up this subject, deal with it adequately and impress upon the people the fact that in the Senate, chosen and owned by organized capital, they have the enemy of democratic government.

Mr. Phillips, by education, temperament and democratic conviction, is eminently fitted for the task that he has undertaken, and he begins it well.

A BABY went to heaven while it slept.
And waking missed its mother's arms and wept.
Those angel tear-drops falling earthward through
God's azure skies into the turquoise grew.

The Stenographer

She Discusses the Disadvantages of the Tax on Holding a Girl's Hand in Massachusetts

By Dorothy Dix

"AGREE, but they slap the taxes on luxury in Massachusetts," observed the Bookkeeper.

"I see that a young fellow in Fall River who held a girl's hand for a single minute was assessed two dollars and twenty cents for the pleasure by a judge."

"No wonder that New England is full of old maids!" exclaimed the Stenographer.

"That's right," agreed the Bookkeeper. "You make the price of holding hands prohibitive and the whole female population is headed toward the Spinsters' Retreat.

"A fellow never in the wide world will get up enough courage to pop the question to a girl unless he can cling to her little hand like a drowning man to a straw. It's the life buoy that holds him up when he shows signs of weakening and the rudder that steers him into the harbor of matrimony."

"Two dollars and twenty cents a minute," murmured the Stenographer, dreamily. "I wonder if it was worth it?"

Several Kinds

"THAT depends," replied the Bookkeeper, "on whose hand it is, the kind of hand it is, the time, the place and the circumstances. I wouldn't pay two cents to hold my Aunt Jane's hand for a year, but—er—I've seen hands that I would have cheerfully plunked down twenty plunks to swing on to for one measly little minute.

"There are hands that are no more squeezable than a canvased ham. There are bony hands that would knock the skin off your palm if you tried to press 'em. There are cold and flabby hands that there would be no more thrill in holding than there would be in holding a dead fish.

"But there are other hands—small and white and soft and dimpled and warm and pink-tipped, that a man can't see without wanting to grab.

"Two dollars and twenty cents a minute is a regular marked-down bargain sale for the privilege of holding 'em, and, as a matter of fact, I've known it to cost a man a hundred times that much."

"Whew!" whistled the Stenographer, incredulously.

"Yes," went on the Bookkeeper, gloomily, "it cost him the woman's support the rest of his life. He started out to caress a little lily white hand and it ended in his working his own fingers to the bone for it."

Right Conditions

"WELL, I'm with the judge that put the discourager on clasping fins," said the Stenographer. "I think it's disgusting, and I never see a love-sick young couple sitting up in public with a death grip on each other's paws without wanting to turn in a hurry call for the Fool Killer.

"All public manifestations of other people's affection ellie sourly on our stomachs," observed the Bookkeeper, oracularly; "besides, there's a time and place for everything, and there's an art to the thing.

"To hold hands so that it is worth two dollars and twenty cents a minute, requires solitude, the lights turned low and a little hand that flutters under yours like a frightened bird, and then grows still as if it had found its nest.

"Or else, in a crowd, a hand that lingers in yours a moment longer than necessary—a moment unperceived by others—but that to you says more than the whole Century Dictionary."

"Well, I don't approve of holding hands," commented the Stenographer, severely.

"And I don't seem to have ever gotten your wedding card," remarked the Bookkeeper.

Fear not the anger of the wise to raise;
Those best can bear reproof who merit praise.
